An Anthracite Strike in the Fall, and Its Value to Bituminous Operators-Good Reason for Naming George T. Oliver U. S. Senator to Succeed Philander C.

Porto Rico's House of Delegates de serves congratulations. Only from that note of sense and warning to Taft in the midst of the din of unthinking popular self-satisfaction. The House Delegates of Porto Rico cabled to Taft the bone that his administration "wil be prosperous for the United States and for the liberties which the people de-serve but which they do not enjoy." Porto Rico is evidently "disenchanted."

Governor-General Smith has refused to firm the decision of the Philippine Court declaring valid the election of Dominador Gomez to the Municipa Council of Manila. The Governor-Gen eral's reason is powerful—Gomez is a "pest," Still more powerful is the Gov. est." Still more powerful is the Gov-or-General's reason for his reason— Gomez attempted to organize the steve-dores. Governor-General Smith eclipses Euclid in close reasoning.

A strike in the anthracite region during the hot season of the year ould not begin to be so fruitful of returns to the dealers in bituminous coal as would be a strike in the winter. Accordingly, the information is being confidently published that there will be no anthracite strike before fall.

Is there anything peculiar in the unanimous choice of George T. Oliver, ron manufacturer and banker of Pittsburg to fill the amexpired term of Philander Knox in the United States Senate? Nothing at all. The peculiarity would have occurred if, now that the tariff "threatens the iron industry," the Pennsylvania plutocracy had selected the representative of some not threatened industry.

Not infrequently the charge is heard against Socialism that it raises a barrier between its devotees and the rest of the population, rendering them quasi aliens to the non-Socialist mass. The charge is incorrect. Socialism, not being Anarchy, does not proceed upon a theory that renders the striven-for Socialist Commonwealth akin to an aerolite dropped from the skies. Socialism is a link in social evolution. How incorrect the charge, and how truly Socialism connects with the past and the present—the best

LABOR REPORT TO SEE LIGHT. Record of Colorado Labor Troubles Buried for Four Years by Hostile Politicians.

Denver, Col., March 9.-Edwin V Brake, the newly appointed deputy state labor commissioner, who assume office in April, will have published his report of four years ago, when he held the same office,

For political reasons his biennial report during his former term in that office was never printed by the state, because of the objection by the then Republican administration to the manner in which Brake treated the labor war in Colorado. It did not then square with the Republicans' conception o the "law and order" issue upon which Peabody was running for re-election as

Because of the position of the Republican party at that time Brake withdrew his affiliation from that organization and cast his political fortunes with the Democratic party. As a result of the Republicans attitude. which was not in line with Brake's report on the labor situation, the secretary of state refused to have the labor commissioner's blennial document printed and it has since slept the sleep of the undisclosed and unrevealed.

UNEMPLOYED IN COLUMBUS. Columbus, O., March 7.-The unemployed at their last meeting organized to look after their own affairs, and not depend upon the charity workers to look out for them any longer. They have not only organized to plead their own cause, but have adopted a preamble which says production should be for use. They seem to see a light on the present condition of affairs.

Committees were appointed to call on the city authorities and the Board of Trade to urge that work be given. A committee was sent to the county com missioners who have in their possession a large fund that can only be used for such purposes. This fund is known as the Akin law fund, which accrues from the thousand dollar saloon tax.

This is the first effort in this county ties have made an effort to get it; but were unsuccessful.

The unemployed are now circulating a preamble and asking other men to join their association. The following is a statement of their aims:

The unemployed of Columbus have in mass meeting assembled, for the purpose of considering methods of action by which the unemployed may be given work or food. This condition of desperation on account of the lack of food, clothing and shelter, is a thing that can only be endorsed for a limited time and under very extraordinary circumstances. Man is not so constituted as to bear the strain and tension that is being labored under.

This association shall be as permanent as the conditions that bring it into existence demand; and its scope of action shall be as elastic as is necessary to assure the workers beyond a doubt the food, clothing, and shelter which they produce, which means that things must be produced for use.

LOS ANGELES TROLLEY MEN MUST SIGN COMPANY'S

Petition Demanding Defeat of Eight-Hour Bill in California Legislature of Be Dropped from Company's Pay-Roll -Men Admit They Are Forced to Comply.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 5.-The

farriman-Huntington interests in the street car system of this city are busy at present testing the patriotism of their employes, the conductors and motormen. The test consists in asking the trolleymen to magnanimously declare that they don't need an eight hours' work-day; that their sense of liberty leads them to declare that a thirteen hours' day is more compatible with the spirit of American freedom. As an inducement, and just to show the company's generosity if the men so declare, the management has promised that they will be allowed to hold on to their jobs.

Superintendent John J. Atkin, of the Los Angeles Railway Company, is particularly exercised that the men should not plunge into suicide. He has had danger signals hung up as follows:

"If you don't sign a petition to the legislature against the passage of the eight-hour law, you are hurting yourselves. "If this law goes into effect the best wages you can make will be at the rate of twenty-four cents an hour, or $1.92 a day."

Every effort is being made by the officials to force the men in their employ to sign the petition. So strong has been the influence brought to bear on this matter that Supt. J. J. Atkin of the L. A. Railway Co. went to the car barns at Central avenue and Seventh street yes terday and insisted to the men that unless their signatures were placed on the petition the maximum of their wages would total no more than $13.44 a week, working seven days.

The officials of the Pacific Electric company also got busy and the men in their employment were treated to a similar dose.

One of the street car men, in talking about the proposition, had this to say: This talk of Atkin sounded like an appeal to an outsider, but it sounded whole lot like a threat to the men! He was giving an ultimatum to the men that, if it was passed, the street car men of the city who have wives and families to support could not get living wages for their work."

"Was it a threat?" he was asked. "Well, he gave us to understand that the names that were on the petition would stay on the payroll and the others might not," was the answer, " "You see, when Huntington comes to look over the payroll, he will pick to stay with the company."

Documents show that at present many men on the street railway system are Working thirteen hours a day.

"I've got two children to send to school and a wife to take care of," said another motorman. "I don't know what the wife and they would do if I was to be dumped upon the street. What's a fellow going to do but sign?"

Laborer, His Eyesight Ruined in Cave-In Gets $3,000 Verdict from Construction Company .

White Plains, N. Y., March 12 .- Anton Was, a laborer who was employed in the construction of the new Bronx Valley sewer and who sued the Mack Paving & Construction Company, which has the contract for the work, for $25,ooo damages for the loss of his eyesight, was awarded a verdict in Justice Tompkins's court to-day for $3,000 against the contractors. The plaintiff was working in the trench at Scarsdale when part of the excavation fell upon and nearly buried him. His eyesight was destroyed. On the trial it was alleged that the company was negligent in not properly shoring up the trench where he was employed. The plaintiff has a wife and nine children.

EVOLUTION OF A CAPITALIST PO LITICAL PAPER, VIA THE S. P. TO THE "I AM A BUMS."

Started by Marcus Daly to Fight Senator Clark-Employes Are Given Stock -S. L. P. Press and Literature Organize L W. W Lumbermen-"Appeal to Reason" and Other S. P. Papers Pushed in by Foremen-Healthy Revolution ary Spirit of Lumbermen to Be Choked Off-Enter Walsh, Heslewood & Co. With Cash to "Buy a Home."

Spokane, Wash., March 12.-The "Kalispell' Bee" of Kalispell, Mont., announces the recent meetings of J. H. Walsh in that city were attended by "a tremendous crowd." It does not tell shout what kind of crowd. Whether it was a crowd of working people who wanted to get organized, or just a gathering of people, who, through curiosity, had come to see and hear the High Priest of Bums.

It will be interesting to many to know a little of some of these papers which have found their account in giving Walsh so much advertising free.

The "Kalispell Bee" was originally established some years ago by the capitalist politician, Marcus Daly to fight the influence of W. A. Clark in Flathead County. A. J. Chapman of the Butte "Inter Mountain" was sent over to take charge of the mechanical de partment. Subsequently, in 1903, Chapman joined the Socialist Party, For five years he has been a close student of Mary and all literature handled by the Socialist Labor Party, though the only literature he ever tried to circulate being the usual kind handled by the Socialist party.

During the troubled times when W. . Clark wanted to get elected to th United States Senate Marcus Daly was putting all his efforts and using all his influence in the legislature to preyent Clark from being elected. It was at this session that Fred. Whiteside, a member of the legislature, stood up on the floor of representatives in Helena and flourishing $30,000 in bills over his head, exclaimed he had received the money from W. A. Clark for his vote and his influence for the election of Clark to the Senate, but, thank God, he was too honest to sell his vote for $30,000 or any other amount. Whiteside, before this, was a poor carpenter and contractor. Since this memorable session Whiteside has been living an easy life. He has been able to build himself a costly mansion, and planted a fine orchard near Kalispell, and has been making regular trips during sessions of the legislature to Butte and Helena and also New York and Washington, D. C., in the interest of legislation and good welfare of the people i general.

Chapman,

secretary of Local Kalispell, Socialist Party, and one Mr. Knight also received a certain amount of stock in "The Bee," and got the Assistant Editorship of the paper and secretaryship of the Democratic Central Committee of Flathead County. The affairs of the Republican party were left to the tender mercies of Mr. Goshorn of the "Inter Lake." The lumber workers at Somers went out on strike from August 2 to August

5. 1906, and won out. Although unorganized, the full force, about 350 men, came out with the exception of a few foremen and about 8 or 10 laborers The literature of the S. L. P. had taught them industrial unionism about this time. A union was formed and, in spite of the fact that the man who afterwards took the lead in getting the union formed, tried-all he could to get the union into the A. F. of L., the men voted unanimous to affiliate with the I. W. W. After this strike the agitators and sympathizers of the S. L. P. were gradually crowded out by the former. The agitation of the S. L. P. and the literature of the S. L. P. was now substituted by Socialist party print-especially "Appeal to Reason" literature, which kept the members in ignorance of the state of affairs during and after the second convention of the paying dues to Sherman. From June, 1907, to May, 1908, Somers and Kalispell were again strongly under the influence of S. L. P. literature and in November, 1907, the Somers and Kalispell locals, having by then repudiated Sherman, reaffiliated with the I. W. W. Up to that time the Socialist party local at Kalispell had not taken any step to promote the interest of the

I. W. W., and kept them in line and

As A. J. Chapman was emphatic in declaring that he only secured those $500 worth of stock in the "Kalispell Bee" to secure himself a steady job: and being a fine gentleman and a man working class at heart, he succeeded in dispelling all suspicion as to his ultimate motive. 'He was invited to join the union, which he did in December, 1007. When the writer of this resigned in April, 1908, as literary agent for Local 421, I. W. W., Chapman was elected for that position. Immediately after this the Socialist party in Kalispell became very, "active in the interest of the I. W. W." It held meetings at the I. W. W. hall and supplied the I. W. W. with speakers. Heslewood was one of the speakers in the I. W. W. Hall under the management of the Socialist party. During a short trip I made to Kalispell last September I looked into the I. W. W. headquarters. I found plenty of "Bulletins," about 150 copies of "Chicago Socialist"; about 75 copies of "Montana News"; a big stack of magazines of McClure's and the like; a checkerboard and a deck of cards; and only 3 copies of the Weekly People, which I suppose had been put there by a sympathizer and evidently overlooked by the "censor."

Now, watch! The literature put in circulation by the S. L. P. at Spokane, Kalispell and Somers is taking effect amongst the lumber workers in those regions, and the Lumber Associations will have a hard time keeping their slaves from organizing industrially. This the lumber barons know. What to do? If the lumber workers are bound to organize along those lines it is to the interest of the lumber combine to who, as stated above, was in charge of promote the schemes and bogus meth-

[A passage froma critique by George hanoff entitled "Joseph Dietzgen," slated from the Russian for The People by Jos. Kresswell.]

When G. P. Dauge, in his Russian lition of Antonio Labriola's "Socialism and Philosophy," published the supple nt thereto of an American Socialist Ernest Untermann, it was evidently with belief in the value of the supplement.

Untermann's work will bring no enent to Russian readers. Its auhor is only very superficially acquainted with the subject of which he treated. To convince himself of this, a reader of discretion has only to peruse the followg citation, very valuable in its way, from the supplement under discussion:
"The founders of scientific Socialism inverted Hegelian dialectics and transd it into a practical method of historical research. They had, indeed, squared their accounts with the German ic philosophy and eighteenth and th century materialism. But they ed themselves from the outset to the ctical social implications of their new ory. They had to specialize in order lish something great, and they cted with keen insight those specialties which bore most directly upon the ctical problems of their time, To what extent they had penetrated indeidently into the problems of cognition efore they made this choice no one can know but those comrades who have charge of the unpublished joint manuof Marx and Engels written in 845-46. But it is safe to say that this would have been published by this time if it contained such a conto historical materialism as that supplied by Joseph Dietzgen. This on is further strengthened by the fact that Marx and Engels acknowledged Dietzgen's merit, and called him her of the proletariat.' And it is further borne out by the fact that even the latest writings of Engels, such Anti-Duering and Feuerbach, in the ages dealing directly with the probas of cognition, free will, moral conmess, do not contain anything h materially modifies the original on of human consciousness for-

What did this so-called original sist in? Untermann confesses out ight that he does not know. Yet, in e of this, he knows that the founders of scientific Socialism had inverted dislectics, and put it on its feet. What does it mean, to put dialectics on its feet?

mann does not explain. Let us turn to the fountain-head. Marx With Hegel the logical proof reality, which in turn is the mal phenomenon. With me it is ntrary. The ideal is material rred to the human brain and

And what does this mean? This is materialistic theory of self-conss. E. Untermann has, theree, within easy reach, a statement n which to form an opinion of the raian understanding of self-conspess, without waiting for the ance into the world of the as yet inputsished philosophical works of Marx and Engels. But he, it seems, did not even suspect the existence of that statement. Like others, he has ally repeated: "Marx and Enrels put dialectics on its feet," comly ignorant of the fact that such thing could not have been accomhed without the ald of the theory

And a very principled writer is E Untermann, to be sure. To tell the truth, he has seemingly good excuse. The Marxian theory has as yet red undeveloped. But this evil he sht have remedied with his own intual powers, had he had any. In ds of Marx Just quoted, namely, that, according to Hegel, the logical as always turned into a subject. ntained a thought literally bortruce should have reminded F. ann of the widely known fact that Marx evolved his theory by the ritical analysis of Fenerbach's philocess from the philosophy the pains to acquaint himself with the y of Fenerbach, he would had ample data at his disposal ige of the essence of the Marxian senough?

theory of self-consciousness. But the gentleman totally failed to get the right information on this subject. Furthermore, the well-known and long-published Marxian thesis on the chilosophy of Feuerbach would have proven to our learned author fust in what particulars, in Marx's eyes, Feuerbach's philosophy was unsatisfactory. Through this Marxian thesis new data would have offered themselves to our learned author for a proper estimate of Marx's analytics. And had he judiciously used all these data, then the reading of Engel's Anti-Duering, and of Feuerbach would not have been fruitless, and he would at least have understood that it is positively impossible to enlarge or perfect Marx by Dietzgen's works.

But Untermann has a very slight acquaintance with the Marxian theory, and its philosophical origin was totally unknown to him. And, last but not least in the realms of philosophy the gentleman is not a dilettante even, but simply a very mediocre figure. It is not surprising, therefore, that he has found it necessary to perfect Marx.

Lately it has become the fashion for any one, considering himself a Marxian, and finding some void in his intellectual horizon, to enlarge and perfect the Marxian theory.

Besides, only from E. Untermann have we got the information that Mary and Engels forever did away with German classic philosophy and French bourgeois materialism. Very well then, but how did they accomplish that? According to him they did it by utilizing the discoveries of both! German philosophy following the dialectical method, was completely surfeited with idealism; bourgeois materialism on the other hand almost completely ignored dialectics. Marx and Engels forever renounced idealism, having made materialism dialectical. But to make materialism dialectical does not yet mean to renounce it. Similarly, to put dialectics on its feet, i. e., make it materialistic. does not mean to do away with dialectics. Of course, the dialectic materialism of Marx and Engels differs in many particulars, for instance, from the French materialism of the eighteenth century. But this difference is simply an unavoidable result of the historic development of materialism itself. The French materialism of the eighteenth century in its turn differed net only from the materialism of Democritus and Epicurus. but from the materialism of Hobbs and Gassendi, That the founders of scientific Socialism did not display the same negligence towards the bourgeois materialism of the eighteenth century which our erudite Mr. Untermann reveals, is seen from one of Engels' articles in the Volksstaat, in which he recommends the French Socialists to acquaint the French proletariat with the "splendid materialistic literature of the eighteenth century." But Untermann has not the least idea of these facts, and furthermore is proud of it, considering himself too far in advance of Marx and Engelsthanks to Dietzgen. However it be our author is firmly convinced that the primary (to him completely unknown, as is revealed plainly by his book) Marxian understanding of husiderably enlarged upon by Dietzgen theory of self-consciousness, and What arguments does he bring to forof definite character it is too: tify his conviction, elucidated by him for the instruction of the "narrow Marxists"? Only a few extracts from the works of Joseph Dietzgen, proving without a doubt that the unusually gifted German workman had great philosophical talent, but which have absolutely not one single theoretical proposition which might have been new in comparison with the works of Marx. Engels, or even Feuerbach. Still Mr. Untermann naively thinks that his extracts shed a flood of light on the "problem of self-conscious-ness." Having joined the above-mentioned extracts to a few from the works of the late Antonio Labriola. he self-satisfiedly remarks that this patchwork "reveals at once the charactoristic difference in theories." Historical materialism is a result of the development of human society; proletarian "monism" has as its fountainhead "universal nature." This man has read Feuerbach and "Anti-Duering" as failed to grasp, after all, the fact that historical materialism served only as a means to the dialectical method of sociology, the fountain-head of which appears in "universal nature." Our earned friend it seems has not read that part of Engels' introduction to "Anti-Duering" where the author says that he and Marx transferred mater-

REVISIONISTS AND REVOLUTIONISTS

REFORMERS ARE THE REAL "IMPOSSIBILISTS": THEIR METHODS LEAD NOT TO SOCIALISM.

Democrata" (Russian) by J. Kresswell.

(Concluded from last week)

Revolutionary class-conscious Socialism does not believe that the reform-mirwill transform capitalism into Socialism. The bourgeoisie in power consents to reforms in two cases only. I. When the working class has organized and become sufficiently strong to be a serious menace to the existing order. 2. When it believes with the help of reforms it can temper down class rising and quiet the rebellious proletariat. The bourgeoisie consents to partial reforms in order to save the situation for itself. Bourgeois reform carries on its brow the mark of conservatism. The bourgeoisie, as an unwilling reformer, naturally ents to a minimum of reforms. And it tries to cut and dry every reform in such manner that it will cost least But in no case does it undermine the system whereby it secures its commanding position.

No dominant class has as yet consented to voluntary suicide. If reform menaces its life interests, it struggles against it as fiercely as against revolution, and it struggles with fire and sword. Therefore, as reformers intend to obtain their hobbies with the help of the reigning powers their efforts are condemned to failure. Sooner or later they are bound to stumble on insurntable obstacles and come to a headon collision with the wall of capital-

This wall must be destroyed. It is impossible to circumvent it. Cunning is useless where might is necessary. The proletariat will not steal its way to victory. It will win in the open organ-ized struggle only, when the historic hour arrives.

The proletarian point of view of reform differs fundamentally from the bourgeois point. The proletariat strives for reform not simply to make present existence tolerable, but to better the conditions of the struggle for its fiberations It views reform as a partial liquidation of an enormous debt due it from contemporary society. Therefore it fights for a maximum of reforms and protests against any reduction of them.

Bourgeois reform differs from the proletarian in its motives, scope and possiconsequences. For justance, there are issues from which the proletarians must scamper as from a conflagration. In substantiation of this innnumerable facts could be cited. We will only point to the activities of Bismarck in the era of anti-Socialist legislation. That activity was called forth by the growth of Socialism, and, according to the calculation of the Iron Chancellor was to have served as an impediment to Socialism's further development. The Social Democracy viewed said activity of the man of blood and iron in the same light. It held itself critically toward his reforms. Different viewpoints lead to different estimates of reform. The bourgeoisie and its political flag-bearer, the Democrat; are interested in having every crumb falling from plutocracy's table regarded as a gift from Heaven, something immense and priceless. Every petty reform granted is weighed like gold and proletarian "rabble" is expected to be forever grateful. The more valuable the sop is considered, the more secure is bourgeois existence. The loud mouthed and turbulent proletarian gets his gullet filled. He has sold his birth-right and the supremacy of his class for a mess of pottage. And talented men with a too susceptible imagination, like Jaures, for instance, who has a weakness for proclaiming every bourgeois reform the greatest triumph of the age, unconsciously play into the hands of the most bitter enemies of the proletariat.

The proletariat and its representatives hold a contrary view. They plainly see the immense difference, not only between revolution and reform which partially eases the capitalist voke, but also those splinters of reform which becloud real gains. And the proletariat is not satisfied with crumbs. It does not muffle its glorious war song nor lay down its victorious arms, but its de mands grow ever louder. It does not apologize, but forever criticizes bourgeois demands. Socialist reforms, i. e. such as have the Socialist essence, will be possible only when the proletariat become political masters. The profetariat will then of necessity have to become an opportunist to a certain degree on account of the backwardness and reaction of the masses, parts of whom will be ignorant remnants of the old order. During the transition period from the old to the new system, the proletariat will grant a se ries of temporary measures enumerated in the Manifesto of the Communist Party.

Translated from the "Golos Social- | carried out by Socialists in the interests of Socialism.

> Marxians point out the natural bounds of bourgeois reform. This boundary is first of all, capitalist private property. which can be diminished but not destroyed, with an income tax or similar measures. Another boundary of capitalist reform is the chronic financial deficit. The yearly budget of the bourgeois state has grown terribly for the last ten years. What are these colossal sums expended upon? Upon militarism, the maintainance of immense armies against the interior as well as exterior foe. Significant reforms deserve considerable expenses. But capitalist society, forced to keep an armed peace at a yearly expense of ten billion dollars. lacks the means. Jaures understood that when he so forcefully started to preach wholesale disarmament, and like a drowning man grasped the straw of the Hague Peace Conference. 'The revolutionary Marxian Socialist is even deprived of this hope. He knows that capitalism and militarism are like the Siamese twins, they cannot be got rid of one at a time. And on this score reform has narrow and well defined limits.

> Meanwhile, how does the controversy between the reformers and Socialists end? At Nurnberg the "orthodox" unquestionably conquered. The comparaively large number of votes, about onethird of the whole convention, polled by the revisionists, is explained by the following circumstances: In the first place the Congress convened in southern Germany, the Eldorado of revisionism. The number of southern delegates was very onsiderable. They had continually declared for reform. In other parts of Germany they succeeded in attracting an insignificant number of devotees.

> In the second place, the revisionists threatened to split the party in a most unceremonious mapner if an unfriendly resolution were passed by the convention. They were preparing to deliver this terrible blow to the joy of the enemies of the party, which, thanks to its powerful unity, successfully weathered so many storms.

As if to fulfill their famons formula, the movement is everything, Socialism the final goal is naught," the revision ists had up their sleeve another formula: "Revisionism is everything, the party-naught." But the half-century old Marxian theory and the sharpening class struggle have accomplished their mission. The work of revisionism has landed on the rocks of bankruptey.

It is otherwise in the petty bourgeois Romance states, such as France and Italy. Here flourish the anarchists and the anarchist syndicalists, and, thanks to their noise, the reform movement has increased. Anarchy plays into the hands of reform.

In France the anarchist syndicalists.

these poor specimens of anarchism, and poorer syndicalists, entered etill into a coalition with reformers, Blanco-Jauresists gainst the hated Marxists. They aided them in obtaining the majority in the party. In France the reign of high-sounding, quasi-revolutionary phraseology begins at this period. The revisionists promised an immediate "Eden" on capitalist soil. The anarchist syndicalists, on their side, assured immediate prosperity by declaring a genganization-this is too slow, monotonous and peaceable. "Direct action," i e., conflicts with police and troops on the streets, in conjunction with strikes -that is the only thing worth while. The syndicates alone possess the character of the class organization. The strike alone is the manifestation of class war. The Socialist Party is a composition of different elements, united in opinion only but not by interests. Such is the theoretical rubbish of the French and Italian anarchist syndicalists.

In practice, however, their tactics have suffered complete defeat. Everything and everybody that are sound have shaken them off. In France their tactics have led to the slaughter of Villeneuve. St. George, and in Italy the rout at Parma. The reformers have utilized this defeat of the anarchist syndicalists. They, the reformers, thanks to that defeat, have gained supremacy in the party.

In France the erstwhile allies of the "direct action" confusion have not de cided to break away as yet, but considerable coldness is felt already. And had there not been an enemy in the field, i. e., the Marxians, this union would have perished long ago.

In Italy the reformers have never united with the anarchist syndicalists. The syndicalist movement has a purely reform character. The syndicalist reformers and the reform politicians, with Turati at their head, have won a victory at Florence. The anarchist syndicalists of the Labriola-Sorell school did These measures, these reforms, will be not even appear at the convention sound Socialist literature

PITTSBURG SLAVES

Shocking Conditions of Life Revealed by Inquiry.

Pittsburg, March 8 .- Chief Investigator Kellogg, who is the editor of "Charities and the Commons," the vehicle for the reports on the Pittsburg survey, sums up some of his findings of his surveyors in these paragrahs:

1. An altogether incredible amount of overwork by everybody, reaching its extreme in the twelve hour shift for seven days in the week in the steel mills and the railway switch yards.

2. Low wages for the great majority of the laborers employed by the mills, not lower than other large cities but low compared with the prices-so low as to be inadequate to the maintenance of a normal American standard of living; wages adjusted to the single man in the lodging house, not to the responsible head of a family.

3. Still lower wages for women, who receive, for example, in one of the metal trades, in which the proportion of women is great enough to be menacing, one-half as much as unorganized men in the same shops and one-third as much as the men in the union.

4. An absentee capitalism, with bad effects strikingly analogous to those of absentee landlordism, of which Pittsburg furnishes noteworthy examples.

5. A continuous inflow of immigrants with low standards, attracted by a wage which is high by the standards of southeastern Europe and which yields a net pecuniary advantage because of abnormally low expenditures for food and shelter, and inadequate provision for the contingencies of sickness accident and death.

6. The destruction of family life, not in any imaginary or mystical sense but by the demands of the day's work and by the very demonstrable and material method of typhoid fevor and industrial accidents; both preventable, but costing in single years in Pittsburg considerably more than a thousand lives and irretrievably shattering nearly as many

The tension which characterizes nearly all of the work in the steel mills manifests itself in a physical and men-We still have a number of the Reports tal strain upon the workers, which is

Pittsburg to imagine themselves the pilot of a travelling crane, guiding the course of a white hot ladle of steel, where a sudden jar or the breaking of any piece of the mechanism of propulsion may spill the liquid metal on the backs of the men below. This may be part of the twelve hour shift and seven days a week toil. Is there any wonder that such a worker may be gray haired at 35? /

Whatever may be the success of the Pittsburg proletarian housewives in reconciling the laws of dietetics with prevailing steel workers' incomes of from $12 to $14 a week, the New York social surveyors find that the social life among the iron and steel workers is at a very low ebb. John Andrews Fitch, a fellow of the University of Wisconsin. and one of Chief Kellogg's willing surveyors, relates that the library and the concert play but a minor part in the leif of a workman who labors on a twelve hour shift.

"It necessarily follows," Fitch believes, "that as books, lectures and concers are cut off from the steel worker, so too are the better forms of social life. The younger men not infrequently take, the time and trouble to dress up for an evening of social enjoyment. There are few over 30, however, who have not given up social observances entirely.

"But the natural desire for companionship cannot thus be stifled, and so the saloon comes forward as the social center. It is a perfectly natural following of the line of least resistance that brings many of these men to the saloon. They do not need to change their clothes and shave before being made welcome."

Fitch goes on to say that the social allurement is not the only factor that takes the steel workers to the saloon. The great heat that permeates nearly all the departments of the mills creates a very natural thirst. The men go to the saloons to assuage this thirst. The steel worker is made a creature of tremendous effort at high tension, says this surveyor, because of the constantly increasing tendency of the mill bosses to "speed up" the production all along the line. The very terminology of the steel mill communities bears witness to this, where the overseer of a gang of laborers is called the "pusher." The men higher up have the more dignified titles of foreman and superintendent, but their function is not different, excepting of the First Convention. In order to gradually growing beyond the powers as their fields of administration are broader and more difficult. They must

The liquor bill in the United States is almost as large as the total wages paid to the working class, and Commissioner Wright of the United States Department of Labor, informs us that the average workingman's family in the country spends only twenty-five cents per week for liquor. From this it is plain that the capitalist class, who prate o much about the intemperant workingmen, spend an enormous amount They are a much smaller class numerically than the workers, yet they spend more on alcohol in one day if temperance were the order of the day it could never accomplish any economic dvance for the workers. PROSTITUTION

"The starvation wages paid to young vomen in stores, factories, restaurants and other places, compel many of them to earn money elsewhere; and when they ere thrown upon their resources, une quipped to earn their living, the tempta tion is very strong to barter away their virtue for what may seem to them adequate money rewards. . . . Prostitution is very largely the effect of the unfortunate circumstances of these poor girls, and the material for brothels is largely recruited from the stores, the factories, and the sweatshops, where they must work many and weary hours cruelly small pay." (Jas. F. Scott, M. D., "The Sexual Instinct.") In Chicago alone there are over 30,000 prosti-tutes and over 50,000 in New York city. This is a terrible condition of affairs. Think of the frightful ravages of disease which results from this condition. It has been said that about 25 per cent of the whole population suffers more or less from syphilis. This disease is very often acquired innocently. It is a curse, a plague.

INSANITY.

"Luxury, idleness, excesses, syphilis, debility, drunkenness, poverty, disease, and overwork, produce vitiated constitutions in which varying types of insanity appear in various nations and climates." (Dr. Chas. Folsom, Pepper's "System of

The above mentioned causes of insan ity seem to be an integral part of the sent social system. The mad dog-eatog struggle for profits, and the plexities and complications of capitalisi will continue to produce insanity, and the only way to eliminate this social malady is to overthrow the system that produces it, and substitute Socialism in

CONDITIONS OF THE WORKERS.

In the United States the free owned nd unencumbered home is fast become ing a thing of the past. The United States Labor Report, 18th Vol., pp. 54-55, shows that 81 per cent. of working class families live in rented homes, and 8 per cent. of the homes are mortgaged, leaving less than 11 per cent. owned free and unencumbered. This shows how rapidly the United States is becoming a nation of tenants.

In New York city, according to the census report, there are a little more than 400,000 homes. Less than 9,000 of these homes are owned free and unencumbered, and less than 14,000 families have even mortgaged homes, whereas 384,349 are rented. What a spectacle. What a glorious advance the workers enjoy after all these years of progress, these marvelous strides of civilization In this same New York city, according to Jacob Riis, friend and co-laborer of Theodore Roosevelt, there are 360,000

defiance of the law."

Other large American citles present a similar picture. Chicago with its "Ghetto" and "back of the yards," its endless chain of slums and disease breeding hovels, is a disgrace to "Twentieth Century Civilisation." The miserable wages paid to the workers force them into the slum districts and keeps them there. They are forced to live from hand to mouth and to toil incessantly.

THE UNEMPLOYED

The army of the unemployed is an in tegral part of capitalist production Without this reserve army, the workers could secure an increase of wages and horter hours very easily. Therefore the capitalist class sees to it that there is lways a surplus of workers on the labor market to be used in cases of strikes and ockouts. In a Socialist state an army of the unemployed would be inconceived able, as production would not be carried on for profit, but strictly for use.

CHILD LABOR.

Child labor is one of the social probems of the day, and it is increasing with alarming rapidity; in some instance growing more rapidly than population The employment of children is one of the main causes of stunted manhood, and is a direct cause of sickness and premature decay. Children are worked long and weary hours in filthy disease-breed ing factories and mines, instead of being sent to school and given the necessar care and healthful surroundings which go to make up a strong mind and body. A civilization that allows its future gen eration to be dissipated in this way is not worthy of the name.

Poverty is part and parcel of the existing regime. All over the world where mercialism, this problem presents itself. The wages paid to the workers, on an average, are barely sufficient to provide them with the mere necessaries of life and when they are thrown out of work they become impoverished.

Industrial depressions are a terrible source of misery to the poorest workers Production now ceases when the capital ist can no longer derive profits therefrom windowless rooms, "and they exist in and the workers are thrown upon the labor market and exposed to starvation. Improvements of machinery also throw workers out of employment and cause intense suffering. The gross contradiction of present society is that the workers make the finest clothing and wear the flimslest, build mansions and live in hovels, produce the best food and eat the worst, and dig all the coal and freeze. In sight of an abundance of commodities the workers are most miserable

In former stages of society, famines appeared only when the soil yielded no harvest, but in capitalist society, famine afflicts the working class when the markets are glutted with the fruits of the earth and the products of industry.

The remedy for poverty is the same for the other evils of capitalism-remove the cause. Socialism is the only solution.

O. WORKKERS!

"The seed ye sow, another reaps, The wealth ye find, another keeps; The robes ye weave, another wears, The arms ye forge, another bears.

"Sow seeds, but let no tyrant reap, Find wealth, let no imposter keep; Weave robes, let not the idle wear, Forge arms, in your defence to bear."

INDUSTRIAL CRISES.

Industrial crises and depressions are fruits of the present system of production for profit, and would cease to afflict society with the abolition of the system. Production now ceases when the capitalist can no longer derive profits therefrom. Under present conditions this is a neces sity, but in an industrial republic, production would not cease so long as there were wants clamoring for satisfaction

Crises appear almost at regular intervals, and are a result of the fact that the masses are forced to consume as little of their product as possible, while the masters appropriate all the rest. As production is increased by mechanical powers, the capitalist class, even with its luxurious mode of life, cannot dispose of the surplus product of the workers, and it inevitably gluts the markets. Then production ceases, and the workers are thrown out of employment and deprived of the opportunity of even toiling for their bread. They thus are forced to starve in the midst of plenty.

THE TRUSTS The Trust is a natural product of competition. Competing capitals are bound to unite as industry develops, and to talk of "busting" the trusts is to talk of putting back the hands of the clock.

A trust is a labor saving institution and is more up-to-date than competition. To attempt to revive the old-fashioned cut-throat competition is like fighting the ocean tides. The trust is reducing the number of social parasites by forcing the petty middle class into the ranks of the toilers. The intelligent wage workers have no sympathy for the "small dealers," as they are just as much of skinflints and labor exploiters as the big capitalists. Increasing the number of burglars in any community doesn't do the community any good.

The talk of "trust busting" is as nonsensical as to talk of "busting" the railroad train and reviving the stage coach. The anti-trust movement puts one in mind of the anti-machinery movement of over a century ago when the English hand loom weavers marched around the country destroying the power looms. Howling mobs drove Hargreaves Arkwright and Crompton from their homes because they had invented the new methods and displaced the old, which threw the hand loom weavers onto the labor market.

It is plain that the working class has nothing to gain by aiding the middle class. When industry is finally concentrated into the hands of a few men, and when the ranks of the toilers are and mented by the fallen middle class, capitalism will be relegated to the museum of past historical epochs.

In the struggle between the small and the larger capitalists, the fittest will survive, and when the struggle is over, the industrial ocean will bear upon its bosom fewer craft, and the trust will be triumphant. Then the mission of the toilers will be to take over the control of industry and abolish all social para-

INEVITABILITY OF SOCIALISM.

In proving the inevitability of the triumph of Socialism, we need but to examine past social systems and the laws which govern social development. In looking over history, we find that man was a savage, and that he gradually that chattel slavery held sway. Later we come to feudalism, and this feudalism was displaced by the present system of production. We find, again, that all tendencies of present times point to the ultimate concentration of industry into fewer and fewer hands. The more productive forces are increased and developed the more helpless the wage workers become, and as they are more and more dispossessed of opportunities and even the chances of employment, they will be impelled by necessity to accor plish their historic mission—the abolition of class society and the inauguration of an industrial republic in which each and every individual shall acquire an economic security. It can be seen that with the close of eighteenth century, which marked the rise to power of capitalist production, the worker owned his own small implements of production, and he was consequently self-employed, and was master of his whole product. Therefore, no contradiction existed. It was private production and private appropriation, and if this status remained to the present day, Socialism would not be heard of; but, in the course of social evolution, the tools of production grew and developed into mammoth machines, which gradually displaced private, and inaugurated class ownership of these means of employment. In modern industry, the workers are grouped together in factories, and the productive processes being socializd, comes this contradiction; -social production and individual ownership and appropriation. This contradiction cannot continue. Society must either revert itself back to individualistic production, so as to be in harmony with the existing individual form of ownership and appropriation, or adopt social ownership and appropriation to harmonize with the already existing form of production. However, this latter solution is destined to prevail, as the wheel of history never revolves backward. The whole trend of industrial development will forcibly carry society onward to the Socialist Re-When the working class has aroused itself to action, and accomplishes its historic mission, man can walk the highlands and enjoy the vision of a land without masters, a land without slaves.

Their claim had no basis in fact, because, with the downfall of a political regime all rights existing under it likewise are swept away. Still, Paris left Jules Favre and his pals take up the rein of government. Why? Marx tells us: "In the turmoil of surprise, with the

This act was, however, one by which the Paris population turned itself over Thiers, Favre, Ferry and the rest of the mbers of the Provisional Governmen inderstood that there should be a simutermined that there should be national defeat. Their reason for this is also told with clearness by Marx as follows:
"Paris was not to be defended with rming its working class, organizing into a effective force, and training their ranks by war itself. But Paris armed was the Revolution armed. A victory of Paris over the Prussian agressor would have been a victory of the ch workman over the French capitalist and his state parasites. In this conflict between national duty and class interest, the Government of National Defence did not hesitate one moment to turn into a Government of National

In the Prologue of Lissagaray's "His tory of the Commune," will be found the details of this government defection. Marx also shows that the officials had resolved to lead Paris to defeat. It is sufficient for the purposes of this sketch to state that the "Government of Na-tional Defection" succeeded in preventing the Parisian workers resisting the Prussians. On January 29, 1871, a little over four months from the declaraublic, the German flag tion of the Re was raised over Paris.

Yet immediately upon assembling it struck a hostile attitude towards it struck a h Paris,-Paris which called it into being and which could dissolve it. On this head Bax says of the body: "This socalled 'National Assembly,' not content with fulfilling its mandate of settling the terms of peace, at once set about openly scheming the overthrow of the

The dominant note of this assembly was war upon Paris, because Paris meant the ascendancy of the working class. The city was from the very first insulted. Garibaldi, a Paris representative, seeing the trend of things and the ce of the clericals and conservatives rose to resign his mandate. was howled down. Lissagaray tells us that: "The thoughtless said, 'the Chamber will last only a day, since it has no mandate but to decide on peace and war.' Those, however, who had watched ading part taken in it by the elergy, knew beforehand that these men would not allow France to escape their clutches." And Marx ennumerates the usu-patory acts of the Assembly as follows: "Paris was exasperated by the frantic anti-republican demonstration of the 'Rural' Assembly and by Thiers's own equivocations about the legal status of the Republic; by the threat to decapitate and decapitalize Paris; the appointment of Orleanist ambassadors; Dufaure's laws on over-due commercial bills and house rents, inflicting ruin on the commerce and industry of Paris; Pouver-Quertier's tax of two centimes upon every copy of every imaginable publication; the sentences of death against Blanqui and Flourens; the suppression of the Republican journals; the trans-ter of the National Assembly to Versailles; the renewal of the state of siege declared by Palikao, and expired on the 4th of September; the appointment of Vinoy, the Decembriseur, as governor of Paris—of Valetin, the Imperialist gendarme, as its prefect—and if D'Aurelles de Paladine, the Jesuit general, as commander-in-chief of the National Guard."

Thus this Bordeaux contingent was certainly bent upon a "bloody business." Yet throughout all these premonitions of a coming storm the Central Committee of the National Guard remained passive. It was not before the "Gov ernment" attempted to make good its demand of compelling Paris to deliver up its arms, arms which strictly beonged to the National Guard and no one

It is known as the Bordeaux Assembly celse, that a stand was taken. Thiers | Labor Party education, will be the most | had sent some of his Federals to the capital in the night of March 17 to steal the cannon. The project was unsuccess ful, no horses haiving been provided to ence was to settle upon the terms of draw the guns away. When Paris awoke the next morning it beheld the dastardly acts. The robbery was stopped, even the troops sent by Thiers fraternizing with the populace. Thereupon the Commun was proclaimed, March 18, 1871.

It fell to the Central Committee of th National Guard to take charge of affairs, which it did, but it immediately ansounced that it wished an election to b held for the purpose of naming municipal councillors. A manifesto which the nmittee issued sounded this revolutionary note:

"The proletarians of Paris, amidst the failures and treasons of the ruling classes, have understood that the hour has struck for them to save the situation by taking into their own hands the direct tion of public affairs. They have under stood that it is their imperious duty and their absolute right to render themselves masters of their own destinies, by seizing upon the governmental power."

In this manner the Commune was pror thrust u unready people. But that does not detract from the heroic spirit in which it was accepted and the resolves to give the working class the very best of conditions. In this respect, from the viewpoint of the ability of the working class o govern itself, the Commune was a ess. It did not go down to defeat ecause it was in any sense "impracticable." The vehement denunciation and renzied opposition of the world-wide capitalist class to the Commune are the best testimonials of its inestimable worth to the workingmen. It would have "made good" had it been left alone. but the enemy was bent upon its de struction and accomplished it.

In the fact that the Commune wa battered down by the opposition material interests, lies the great lesson for us of to-day. The revolutionary work ing class should not make the mistake of thinking that the ruling class will relinquish its holdings with equanimity. Speculation on this point is idle. And any question of buying the capitalists out only saps the revolutionary spirit of the world's workers. To buy out the bourgeoisie amounts to admitting the egitimacy of their present practices of plundering, and this is the very negation of revolutionism. Disaster only can follow such teaching.

Of course, we recognize that if force will have to be resorted to in the Social Revolution, the fault will lie with those unwilling to abide by the dictates of the people. But we must prepare our forces accordingly. Education, sound Socialist important instrument in avoiding disaster in this respect,

There are those who, meaning well, are taken in by the argument that, in order to induce workingmen to accept the principles of Socialism, a "practical" demonstration of it must be given. These individuals are found lending support to "co-operative colonies." The Commune forever answers the question of the feasibility of such schemes. Co-operative colonies, apart from their error of attempting to reform society behind its back, would no more be allowed to succeed by the capitalist class than was the

The workingmen of Paris made several damaging military mistakes-mistakes that must be attributed to a want of class consciousness, with all that the term implies. They were too hopeful for the governmental rascals to turn out not so bad. Besides they themselves se to have wished to appear not such horrible monsters as the hostile press and interests were proclaiming them to be. Their misleading policy cost them dear. They had it in their power to coop up tion: they failed to seize the opportunity. The Bordeaux Assembly was certainly a lawless body and should have been squelched at once: Paris simply looked on. The Commune needed funds. The Bank of France was in their hands. Still their representatives went to the governor of the bank and begged for oans, whereas they had the right to help themselves. 'The "sacred right" of property no doubt was fresh and ringing in their ears.

The resources of this bank, according to Lissagaray, were, coin 77 million francs; bank notes 166 millions; bills discounted, 899 millions; securities for dvances made, 120 millions; bullion, 11 millions; jewels in deposit, 7 millions; public effects and other titles in deposit, 900 millions. This was certainy a prize to hold against the foes of the Commune. Yet it was all left untouched. Had it been seized the claimers of law, order and property would have hesitated considerably before plunging upon their lawless career. Bax mentions a great weakness. H tells us: "One of the most unfortunate characteristics of the leaders of the Commune was their sensitiveness to bourgeois public opinion. The first thing for the leader of a revolutionary movement to learn is a healthy contempt for the official public opinion of the 'civilized world.' He must resolutely harden his heart against its 'thrills of horror,' its 'indignation," its 'abomination,' and its destestation, and he must learn to smile at all the names it will liberally shower upon him and his cause."

What a warning and its need to be heeded to-day! Contrast the Hillquits and the Robert Hunters basking in the sunshine of capitalist "respectability." Consider the pre-election boosts which these gentlemen and "parlor Socialists" received from the press of the enemy. And then think of the revolutionary fibre of an organization harboring such individuals. Contemplate the Spargos, the Stokeses, and all the other fry in the Socialist party camp who chase after the "better classes" and whose consuming ambition is to be considered respectable by the enemy. Polite revolutionists! It were to laugh were it not so deplorably tragical.

Further, reflect upon the capers of such papers as the "N, Y. Call," declaiming against traction trusts, and demanding Strap Hangers Leagues, and withal flying the colors of 'Socialism." It beats the Journal for contempt. Yet the Socialist party is no better than its children. That party, in short, has all the earmarks of a traitor to Socialism, a deceiver of the deepest dye. It is an organization which apes the conventional standards of capitalist "respectability" and engrafts them upon the working class, instead of inspiring that class with the ethical standards of the Social Revolution. Away with that disgrace!

The Paris Commune has lived for the nodern working class. Its experience should not go unnoticed. We honor our noble dead on the 18th day of March for the glorious work to which they dedicated their lives. It is with heart-breaking sorrow that we look back over the horrible fate which they were made to suffer. It would seem as though the fates were determined that purity, justice and kindness should not be enthroned. But the highest respect, the greatest tribute that we can bring to our departed heroic comrades is that we profit by their example and resolve that no such calamity shall again overtake the working class.

Let us be men; let us be women; let us, above all, be revolutionists. Face the truth, and respect that only. The Socialist Labor Party has a message to deliver. Let every upright person pon-

ONE NARROW EJCAPE-GOOD LUCK FOR THE NEXT!

The Labor Movement has had a nar row escape. Over the head of Chief Justice Sheppard of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, who correctly held that an injunction restraining a paper from making a publication was in violation of the Constitution forbidding any law abridging the freedom of press, and that, if a paper inflicts injury, the remedy lies in a suit for dam--over the head of these sound but dangerously untimely views, the Court fortunately upheld with slight modifications the injunction issued by Judge Gould, and upon which Judge Wright based his sentence of Gompers and associates for contempt of court.

The action of the District Court of Appeals was as the times require. A ersal of Judge Gould's writ would have been harmful to the healthy growth of the Labor Movement of the land.

All the good that the Labor Movement ould derive from the wrongful acts of Judges Gould and Wright have been ed. The last drop of good was ed out of them. They served to enstrate the class nature of capital ist Government-one measure for the capitalist, another measure for the workman-law for the former, arbitrari ness for the latter. This was a valuable lessen without which the Labor Movement can not make real progress It was a lesson read line upon line, and enforced with logical strictness. Had Chief Justice Sheppard's views unfortunately prevailed, sound though they are tract, that lesson would have been lott. The escape was narrow; but cedures that are to test Judge Wright's sentence. These are stages of danger. May they likewise be escaped, and the stand and be enforced.

The lesson so far taught by the-thanks to a long-headed Providence!so far triumphant Van Cleave injuncrather, one-and-a-half legged. The full leg was furnished by Judge Gould's writ her with the decis on sustaining th same just rendered by the District Court of Appeals. The half leg was furnished by Judge Wright's sentence. The rest of the leg-it is to be hoped Providence will not now forsake the Labor Movement!-will be furnished by the de cisions sustaining the sentence upon ap-at capitalist Government is-that Labor Movement has now learned. What now remains for it to learn, so it nay stand, and walk-and run, is that it must become ORDERLY, and that, to become orderly, it must abandon the ne ORDERLY, and that, to rder-breeding theories of pure and en the capitalist social order, Labor a merchandise-live stock. The eco ie law dictated by the capitalist social order is that the price of merchan-dise-live stock included—depends upon its supply in the market. The price of live stock merchandise Labor, that s, wages, can not emancipate itself from this law, under capitalism. To suppor eapitalism, and yet strive after a wage rate that is a denial of capitalist econic law, is irrational. As a conse e, to uphold a social order that des the status of merchandise to Labor and yet expect human treatment for the , is to cap the climax of ir sality. Gompers and his fellow sen-is represent this double dyed in-t, and promote it. Those who do take the consequences—the kicks

when the master wills it, the crumbs

when he so may please.

Gompers, Mitchell, Morrison have barked back at the master whom they worship, sacrosanct Capitalism. For such insolence, not to say profanity, they deserve, under the social order they uphold, to go to jail. Only then will they have fulfilled their mission in the scheme of the Movement. When the urn-key turns the key upon them, then will the lesson be complete to the Labor

Order, not disorder, does Progress de nand. Gompersism spells disorder. Not until the sublime aspirations, of which Compersism is a caricature, take to heart the double lesson, and organize on the political as well as on the industrial field to overthrow the capitalist social order,-not until then will the Move-ment enlist the Genius of the Age to its standard, because not until then will it epresent ORDER.

May that blindness with which Provi lence is proverbially credited with smiting those whose downfall It has decreed not fail the American Labor Movement at this pinch. May the danger points ahead be escaped—however narrowly—as the danger point just behind was es-caped, and Judge Wright's sentence be sustained.

That element in social reform move nents whose mania is to fight "religion should pause before the appointment of Abbe Loisy as Professor of the History of Religions at the College de France by the Government of Catholic France.

Abbe Loisy is an excommunicated pre late. While, in the strict sense of the word he can not be said to be the founder of the powerful intellectual movement now going on within the Roman Catholic Church, called Modernism, and against which the Papacy has fulminated its bulls, all the same Abbe Loisy was the leading Church dignitary who, before Modernism crystallized into a movement, brought the stores of his vast erudition and the fires of an upright mind against tenets that he repelled as alien to religion, and which in fact had no purpose other than to subserve the ends of politics in ambush. The politicial forces thus unmasked were not slow to make felt what powers they have left. They broke loose with all the force they could muster together under present enlightenment over the abbe's devoted head. Persecuted, inhibited, encyclicaled against, Abbe Loisy held his ground, and when the Modernist Movement took shape he quickly found his place in its foremost ranks, thus draw-ing upon himself collectively all the Papal bolts he had been the target of individually. It is such a personality that has just been distinguished with a professorship in the College de France

-a Catholic country. The Socialist Movement has nothing to do with religion-anymore than it has to do with astronomy, mechanics or therapeutics. That which seems to atgue to the contrary-the conflict that the pulpit of all creeds has initiated by its attacks against Socialism-in fact proves the point. Only that which is it was made. That's good. That was one narrow escape. There are other danger points ahead.

The danger points ahead lie in the protection of the word "religion," that the attack comes from How distinct the two are threatened resists. Socialism threatens comes from. How distinct the two are, and that the two can be held distinct, is the object lesson furnished by the appointment of Abbe Loisy.

"DOING THINGS."

sistent hody is located in Wis consin, and its ablest head, naturally, is Victor L. Berger, the leader of the Wisconsin organization with headquarters in Milwaukee. It is natural, n turn, that Berger's slogans should permeate the national organization, The boast and brag "We are doing things," so common on the lips of S. P. speakers everywhere is a slogan that started with Berger, and has been handed down, or around. Up to now it was a difficult matter to discover what the "things" were that the S. P. was "doing." Like the Irishman's flea, the "things" never could be caught, so speak. The mystery is, finally solved-and solved at headsprings. Berger, and, through him, the S. P. is, indeed, "doing things," at least one "thing," and a valuable thing it is,

From the theoretic economic viewpoint the principle is elemental, from the practical political view-point in order to help disentangle the proletariat from the tangle-foot platforms of capitalist parties, the principle is essential that the working class do not pay the taxes, these being paid by the capitalist class out of that portion of the wealth produced by Labor which Labor never gets, it being plundered from Labor in the process of production. Is it possible for the S. P., through Berger, to be helping to establish so important a principle? Strange as it may seem the S. P., through r, is "doing" this very "thing."

Through the influence, underground overground, of Milwaukee's A. F.

of which Berger is an indefatigable member, the City Council decided to make the Union Label a requisite in specifications for printing contracts. As everybody knows, such specifications imply dearer printing contracts; as everybody also knows, the higher the expenses of Government all the higher the taxes; as, furthermore, it is well known, Berger's Milwaukee S. P. is "feared and respected and heard from" in Milwaukee's City Council. into which he has elected a large number of his party members; finally, as every cat and dog, in Milwaukee particularly, is aware of, the elected Berger city officials sit up at night to protect the working class from being burdened. Seeing all this, here, accordingly, we have Berger proving that the working class does not pay the taxes. How else could he strain after city contracts with specifications that can not choose but tack up the taxes?

Class-consciously enough, the Milwaukee Court, knowing full well that taxes are paid by its own paymaster, the capitalist class, and alert, to keep what burdens it can from being dumped upon the capitalist's shoulders, hastened to sustain an injunction to restrain the City Council from incurring the more expensive printing contracts

Thus directly by Berger's own act, and indirectly by the act that his conduct goaded the capitalist Court to, Berger's S. P., and thereby the whole S. P., is disproving the "Daily People lie" that it is so unsound and bourgeois as to claim that Labor pays the taxes; it is illustrating with obverse and reverse pictures the Socialist truth that the capitalist is the tax-payer; -it is "doing things."

THE PROBLEM AND TASK

The Nome, Alaska, "Industrial Worker." organ of the Nome Miners' Union, affiliated with the Western Federation of Miners, devotes a sympathetic article to the lamentable fracas that has virtually dissolved the I. W. W., leaving, of the once national and promiseful organization, nothing but such "I-am-a-Bums" flotsam and jetsam, as one hears of occasionally here and there, with a Spokane lodging-house as real headquarters, and a sturdy band, with New York for headquarters, that holds aloft, above the wreck on the industrial field, the banner of Industrial Unionism.

Our sympathetic contemporary in Nome does not despair of the future—that's well. All the same, its diagnosis of the disease savors of Bewildermenta state of mind perilously close to Despair. An opinion that correctly refers to intolerable "autocracy" at the once headquarters, and from that throws the blame upon something that must have been "lacking in the construction" of the organization—such an opinion is the that the startling object lesson furnished by the fracas might well justify, but which we should all guard against. The object lesson is pregnant with instruc-

The staunchest of crews could hardly do more than, if it could do as much as, save its life upon a loosely jointed, crazy craft. On the other hand, to turn turtle is the almost inevitable fate of the staunchest and best jointed craft manned by a crazy crew.

The experience made by the I, W. W. supplements the store of practical in, formation which the A. F. of L. has been From Socialist party premises its contributing to the Labor Movement.

Robust ignorance will prevent Progress; persisted in it will cause retrogres The contribution of the A. F. of L to the Labor Movement is the loud warning that the body that persists in ignor-ance is bound to fall behind. A. F. of L. benightedness is sinking the wheels of its chariot into ever deeper ruts, and, consequently, corruption. A little knowledge crazes little heads The identical little heads who, within the fold of the A. F. of L. and kindred organizations, caught not the faintest ray of light, or, if they did, were otherwise surrounded with two heavy banks of darkness for the glimmerings which they caught to make them lose their base, these identical little heads lost their quilibrium in the I. W. W., and, when dvanced to office, grew so top-heavy that they stood upon their heads. Names are superfluous. They will occur to all who are posted. The contribution of the I. W. W. to the Labor Movement is the equally loud warning that a crazy crew in charge of the best of ships will make it turn turtle, and likewise land in corruption Movements make men: the Movement s greater than any man in it. All this s true, and must never be lost sight of. But this other is true also-Movements are of men: without the right men, no Movement. The two principles must be held together.

The joint contribution of the A. F. of L. and the I. W. W. to the practical experience of the economic Movement is-"Do not, on your life, organize first and educate afterwards: educate first of L organizations, in general, and, and organize afterwards. Such has been in particular, through the influence of the baneful effect of pure and simple the Milwaukee Typographical Union, policy that, if you organize first, then one of two things will happen-

Either the leaden weight of pure and simpledom will be too heavy to overcome, and relapse will be certain;

Or, lightweights' are sure to turn up at the top, like small potatoes in a shaken barrel, and, adding to the fatuousness of pure and simpledom that they bring along the vainglory which comes from a glimmer of freshly acquired and undigested knowledge, fly off the handle. -In either case disaster, not unaccom panied with corruption.

THE USES OF KINGDON.

"Lest we may forget" the luminous Marxian generalization that "it is not because he is a leader of industry that a man is a capitalist; on the contrary, he is a leader of industry because he is a capitalist"-lest we may forget this valuable pointer, and fall into the bourgeois-cultivated error that capital is a reward of leadership in industry-lest the fact and the important conclusions therefrom fail to be constantly kept in mind, the stock holders of the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain Railroad have considerately elected Kingdon Gould, the son of George J. Gould, and grandson of Jay Gould a member of their Board of Directors.

This action on the part of the M. P. & I. M. R. R. is, indeed, considerate. The profundity of the Marxian theory, quoted above, could not be better confirmed. Kingdon Gould knows about railroading or its financing no more than a spinster knows the division of a battle, nor even the bookish theorick thereof, wherein even the togaed consuls could propose more masterly than he. Yet Kingdon becomes a leader in industry. Why? Simply because he is capitalist, Again, Kingdon promises to illustrate another Marxian principle-at least those who elected him a director expect ne will, and have said so.

Marx points out that one of the funcions of the capitalist, by reason whereof he becomes a "leader of industry," is the function of exploitation, on account of which the form of his leadership, or control is despotic. That the electors of Kingdon expect much from this particular function appears from the gusto with which they have hearkened back to an incident in Kingdon's freshman year at Columbia when the stripling drew a pistol upon his fellow students. The electors of Kingdon Gould probably hearkened still further back. They probably recalled, but preferred for good reasons not to mention the incident in the switchmen's strike at Buffalo of 1892, when the switchmen struck to help enforce the 10-hour railroad law just passed, and when the Sheriff of Eric County, refusing to pretend that he could not enforce order and thus furnish an excuse for the calling out of the troops, George Gould, Kingdon's father, shook his fist under the Sheriff's nose and, in regulation capitalist "law and order" style, threatened him with bodily harm. Like father, like son had been verified at Columbia; like father like son is now expected to be verified upon a larger scale by the new "leader of industry."

Thus, like measles and New England rum, which, according to Artemus Ward, have their mission in the scheme of Nature, Kingdon Gould has his mis sion in the scheme of social enlightenment on two cardinal points-the point of the genesis of the leader of industry and the point of the despotic function of such leadership.

The New York "Evening Post" speaks of "that almost forgotten animal, the consumer," as a reason why the miners' demand for higher wages should not be granted. If there is an "animal" that has not and never can be forgotten and that always elbows itself into sight and feeling-most noxious sight, most painful feeling-it is that self-same ani mal the "Consumer." We are all consumers. He who refers to any one in particular as a "consumer" can not have the whole public, he must have a specific portion of the public in mind. Who portion may that be? Why, of course the portion that consumes without producing-in short the capitalist class. That is the "animal Consumer." H forgotten? He won't let you-not un til you have buried him ten fathom: deep in the economic grave to which in due time he will be consigned.

The long-suffering patience of the American people under abuse has long been manifested by its tolerance of the vicious antics of Anthony Comstock, the alleged censor of morals. That there is an end even to the endurance of the most patient is manifested by the rebuke administered to the worthy by Judge Malone, who sharply reprimanded him for conduct that amounted to "placing price upon crime," and refused to take his oral explanation, demanding that he submit affidavits

THE SOUTHERN

III .- THE L W. W. CLUBS AND THEIR SPINELESS OPPONENTS.

By R. Mackenzie, Sydney, N. S. W.

The Socialist Labor Party of Australia was the direct means of bringing they are honored by having such persons into life the agitation for revolutionary industrial unionism, which has resulted in altering the ideas of many in the pure and simple trade unions. They did not necessarily adopt the whole program, but nevertheless some progress has been made in penetrating the hard baked crust of conservatism within which the trade unions are encased. To the physical forcist and the anti-S. L. P.ite this statement is as gall and wormwood, but the fact cannot be denied that wherever the fighting Socialist Labor Party has reof progress, the organization will be found fighting for the emancipation of the working class.

It was the sound literature and teachings of the Socialist Labor Party that resulted in the formation of the concrete J. W. W. and of the clubs in Great Britain and Australasia. The Socialist Labor Party in Australia, on the formation of the I. W. W. in America, held meetings to discuss the new- unionism, and much midnight oil was burned considering the embryonic structure from all sides. The outcome was the enthusiastic endorsement of the I. W. W. Preamble, steps being immediately taken to issue a call to form a club for the purpose of propagating industrial unionism in Australia. The S. L. P. members joined in this work to a man. The club was launched in October, 1907.

Looking over the agitation and progress made during my personal experience of eight months, some satisfaction can be felt at the degree of success met with. The club in Sydney has 140 members and clubs are organized in Melbourne, Wallsend West, Wild River, and in Wellington, New Zealand. The Sydney Club is the largest in number and possesses many speakers, far more than are usually met with in one local organization.

Propaganda meetings are held in the Domain and Prince Alfred Park, on the first Sunday in each month, and in outlying districts frequently. The different political Socialist organizations agreed to forego their Domain meeting on that day and the Socialist Labor Party has lived up to the agreement, but the Socialist Federation of Australia only held to it for three meetings. When the street car strike took place, the I. W. W. club was notified, when about to hold their meeting, that the Socialist Federation of Australia would hold a meeting to "expose the hand of the Labor M. P. in the defeat of the strikers." But to one who has seen Holland's tactics 'tis only too evident that his was the hand behind the scenes to make political capital out of the strike. There was no need of the Socialist Federation breaking away that Sunday, as the speakers of the I. W. W. were better fitted from that platform to criticize the failure of the strike, even though Labor M. P.'s had a hand in the defeat, for the conductors and motormen went out under organized scabbery.

*At the S. F. of A. convention, Holland had attempted to have a resolution accepted by the S. F. of A., that "the I. W. W. preamble should be altered to allow the I. W. W. clubs to be affiliated with the Socialist Federation of Australasia." At the following meeting of the I. W. W. club, a motion was passed unanimously "That we reaffirm our ention of the I W its entirety." Holland attempped to justify his action and said "if the resolution for affiliation was carried by referendum vote of the S. F. of A., the members of that organization would join in a body and affiliate the I. W. W. clubs with the S. F. of A." Being unsuccess ful in this attempt, and being therefore unable to use the I. W. W. club for his purposes, the street car strike offered the opportunity to violate the voluntary agreement with those clubs. Thus the entering of the wedge of disruption be

The membership of the clubs is no criterion of the agitation that has spread throughout Australia. Every now and then some "Labor" leader disclaims being a member of the I. W. W.

Recently a letter and copy of the publication of the "Industrial League" of Great Britain, an I. W. W. club, which repudiates political action, was received by the Australian clubs. The Sydney and West Wallsend clubs promptly repudiated that league as an I. W. W. club and forwarded a letter to that effect. Simultaneously there arrived here from America, the "new preamble" of the "L W. W." which, however, did not affect the clubs, as they are placed on bed-rock, and cannot be shifted by any Axelson or sneak thief tactics.

"Labor" Leaders Scorched.

The present Federal Attorney-General W. M. Hughes, is a one-time member of the Australian Socialist League. He is a lawyer by profession and is president of the Teamsters' Union and secretary of the Longshoremen's Union. How is that for scientific organization? The pure and simplers evidently flatter themselves as president and secretary.

Hughes is undoubtedly the bitterest enemy of the I. W. W. clubs in Australia. In an ultra-capitalist paper, the "Daily Telegraph," he wrote many two column articles ridiculing and sneering at the I. W. W. peramble. He was replied to by fellow-worker Batho and promptly squelched. Hughes' closing words in the discussion were, "Anarchist, Anarch-The next wise guy to thrust a lance at the I. W. W. was a man named Catts, ceived its being there, in the front rank the secretary of the railroad workers and a "Labor" member in the House of Representatives. The I. W. W. gave him no quarter. It challenged him to a public meeting in his constituency to prove his statements, his article in the "Star" having opened with the headline, "The I. W. W. and Blood Red Anarchy." He was picking up the line where his compatriot dropped it. However the challenge to Catts was too much for him, and he ducked like greased lightning, while his voice became as silent as the tomb. At the meeting in Newtown to reply to Catts some of Catts' dupes were there and shouted "Anarchist," but the speaker, Ostler, handled them without gloves.

The next to try his hand was Arthur Griffiths, "Labor" member in the State Legislature, who, in Newcastle at the eight-hour day demonstration, challenegd the I. W. W. to debate. The West Wallsend club promptly accepted, but Griffiths has dodged and shuffled since then. The debate has not yet taken place, nor will it if Griffiths can avoid it. The street car and rockchoppers' strike was a splendid opportunity to advocate the principles of the I. W. W., and was taken advantage of to expose the organized scabbery of trade unionism. Then another "Labor" member in the State Legislature immediately accused the L W. W. of being the cause of all the recent strikes. He was challenged to prove his statements, but he also was put on the run. It is disgusting to see these craft union officials and "Labor" members strutting before their admiring dupes slandering and lying about the I. W. W. How brave they are when they are in-toxicated with their overflowing wisdom! But the challenge from the I. W. W. clubs acts like an Arctic stream on their backbones and tongues; and they shrink into nothingness in comparison with their previous braggadocia The Australia labor fakir that will

Some union secretaries reply thus, or in similar strain: "My union does not desire to hear a speaker on industrial unionism as we do not require such an address," Nevertheless, the ear of the rank and file has been gained and there is a growing recognition, specially forced by the recent strikes, that craft unionism is way resist the en croachments of the capitalist class, as the following instances show. In the recent conferences between the workers n the Broken Hill mines and the mine owners, the trade unions conducted the negotiations as the "combined unions," all craft unions being represented, such as miners, machinists, iron molders, etc. The strike or lockout is at present in operation with the various unions standing fast in the struggle against the re duction of wages which the Broken Hill Proprietary Co. is attempting to enforce. The Sydney Trades and Laor Council adopted an alteration in their constitution, which reads as fol-

Every society and council affiliated shall agree to and abide by the decision of council in all matters requiring its intervention and judgment.

Provision is made for the necessary machinery to call into being the convention to create the concrete organization in Australia, when a specific number of members are in the clubs. "The People," the official organ of the Australian Socialist Labor Party, is masterly in its support of the revolutionary union. When the principles of the I. W. W. have been attacked the 'People" alone has flown to the defense. In its columns are "the cardinal points of industrial unionism," and every meeting of the I. W. W. clubs, street or hall

Chicago, March 10.

* Chicago, March 10, 1909.

I am 'very sorry' to be compelled t mix in this affair, but it is too much to stand by and see men maligned, as Daniel De Leon is being maligned by such men as you, Mr. Heslewood.

I received a correspondence from friend in the Northwest stating that you, F, Heslewood, are making the assertion that on the trip to the Stuttgart Congress. De Leon traveled first class. and had a Negro to sponge and ruh him down every day, while you, Heslewood, traveled steerage, with all the inyou, Mr. Heslewood, told me upon your return that you traveled second class.

Now, Fred Heslewood, did you for get that when you returned from Stuttgart you told us how you traveled, and that De Leon was the prince of nich, and that you and De Leon stopped at the same hotel, and that after De Leon left, you were lost, as he was able to assist you because he could handle the language, etc.?

Now, if De Leon had "a Negro to wait upon him." Mr. Frank Bohn must also have had such an attendant, for compuring the expense accounts of De Leon and Bohn there are but a few dollars'

And how about yourself, Mr. Hesle wood? Your expense account does not seem to be any less than De Leon's aceled steerage, and, not having "a Negro to rub you down," your expense account should have been considerably

Furthermore, Mr. Heslewood, you traveled from the West to Chicago on a pass, which you were very careful not to let the office, or headquarters know anything about. Did you want to keep it secret because you desired to put in or bill-to headquarters of the I. W. W. for the full fare?

At the third annual convention you nothing but praise for those whom you now abuse as "politicians," and every other epithet that you can apply.

Why this change in one short year? your two or more weeks' stay in Chicapo this last trip, and explain your change of opinion, as regards these "political gentlemen"? You studiously kept away because you knew what you had said a year before, in 1907, and you were afraid to face the music.

Do you remember how you were waiting here in Chicago for headquarters to money before you started for the West, and at the same time you had $100 in Canadian money, which you were very particular to keep from the office. or to let the office know anything about, for fear that you would not receive anything from the office, as they were short

UNINSPIRING S. P. PAPERS. To the Daily and Weekly People; --nowing the "People" is edited, owner atrolled by workingmen of the ial which appeared in the "Los cord," a capitalist newspaper, on March 4. The editorial is on stion of class consciousness and who was being examined for jury duty in the Calhoun case in Frisco. The broker told Heney that: "My sympa thies and prejudices are all with Mr. Calhoun, Mr. Ford, and their associates. My friends are all of that class, and I would never vote to punish any of them. . . I wouldn't find him (Calhoun) guilty under any circumstances." In reference to this the said editorial says: "Class consciousness in this country has always existed. But so far as it is a real force. It has had its origin in the men who have made of themselves a class fattening on the rest of frenzied finance, monopoly and organized loot.'

Being myself a Socialist the editorial appealed to me in this way: It is bet-ter than anything I have ever read in the "Chicago Daily Socialist." "The Appeal to Reason," or the "New York

SLAVE MARTS REMAINING AFTER LINCOLN.

But March 1, I beheld the line stretched not only from south to the offices, and a similar line formed from the north, but also one ten abreast stretched from east to west. The sidewalk was completely covered with men, and their objective point was the auction block (company's desk), behind which sat Depew and Gorman. But on the month be slave buyer, who personified the C. R. S. L. P. ACTIVITY IN CHICAGO.

To the Daily and Weekly People: Gillhaus is now in Chicago. He spoke to a good crowd of Lettish workers Saturday, and gave an excellent talk on party organization work Sunday to the ocal members. He will be kept busy for the next few days, then, after making a short trip to Milwaukee will return to the city in time to deliver the main address at our Commune Festival on Sunday, March 14th. Gillhaus has made a good impression and no doubt during his short stay will give a good account of himself.

I. Friedman of the Hungarian Branch debated on the "Difference Between the S. L. P. and the S. P." with a repreentative of the latter organization in Friedman's Hall yesterday afternoon. From reliable accounts of the affair I am informed that our Hungarian comrade handed out to this fellow one of the worst lickings that ever an S. P.-ite got. He was whipped so bad that he refused to take the platform when it was offered him to refute the mass of documentary evidence presented by Friedman proving the S. P. organization to be nothing but counterfeit.

Our Hungarian members have a splen did organization in the city. They attended the debate in full force and to say that they were elated over the result of it is putting it mildly.

We are going ahead with the work of the Commune Festival and with Gillhaus meetings, and if all goes well success is

PLACE THE PEOPLE IN THE HANDS OF WORKERS.

To the Daily and Weekly People:-Ve hear frequently nowadays that workngmen are more ready to accept the teachings of the Socialist Labor Party than before, and that is why it is high time for us of the S. L. P. to get a move on and deliver the message to them. (1 believe that such is the case, but I do not take that to mean that all the workingmen accept the S. L. P. teaching more readily to-day than yesterday, but that there are more of them ready to-day than before. No doubt there are some arriving at a state of mind every day to listen to our teachings. If this is the way the workingman is getting ready, then it is a question of our finding him with our message. We must not depend on chance altogether to run across him. We should hunt for him.

I submit as one way to do that the following: walk up to every man who looks good to us and ask him to subscribe to the Weekly People. I think everyone of us would be tickled if some one would walk up and ask us about the S. L. P. Well, to ask a man to subscribe to the paper gives us a chance to tell him all about the party without his asking. If we can not interest him he is not one of them who are "ready."

I can assure S. L. P. men that I have gained a much better insight of the workingman's state of mind in this way than I could have gotten in any other manner. Even if no sub. is landed, some good is accomplished. Some new thought may have been communicated or some misconception righted. It takes no special ability or "nerve" to do what I suggest. The qualities that all S. L. P. men possess are G. A. Jennings.

THE "CALL" TARRED WITH THE SAME PITCH

To the Daily and Weekly People:cuttings I accidentally came across one from the "Call." It explained what terrible men Hearst, employed on his Cosmopolitan Magazine. David G. In one of these he showed that Senator Dryden of New Jersey was just as bad as Platt. when Dryden was "in for his." the Prudential Life Insurance Company, of which Dryden is President, sent in a very large and expensive advertisement. What did had Hearst's men do? They decided to accept the money for the advertisement, and let Dryden escape further publicity. The "Call," indignant-ly, calls attention to such mercenary tac-

But, then, Hearst is a capitalist.

While looking over the "Call" to day I again failed to see any notice of the lockout on the Jewish "Forward." The treatment accorded the writers on that paper was the cause of a strike and lockout, but while the "Call" was silent about the lockout it had the audacity to acknowledge a donation of $200 from the Jewish "Forward."

One is tempted to say: "Et tu, Brute!" The similarity between the two cases is striking. There is only one important difference: the "Call's" owners are "So-

Your leaflets issued for February, 1909, with your application blank to join in the Victory Club for 1912, were duly received. In reply I want to say that so far as my sincerity and earnestness in the couse of Socialism are concerned: in regard to the principles involved in the Socialist movement, I am with you as ever, notwithstanding the fact that Local Niobrara, of which I have been an active member, withdrew from the Socialist party movement on February 17, 1909. The Local gave as its reason a resolution, of which I mailed a printed copy to your office on February 20, and hereby enclose you another, so that you may thoroly understand my reasons and those of Local Niobrara for withdrawing from the Socialist party move-

There is another reason why I cannot rejoin your, the S. P., movement. Since no man is physically normal without two arms and two hands, and no bird can fly without two wings, so no Socialist move ment can reach its ultimate goal without the industrial organization as one of its wings, the political organization being the other wing. Therefore your S. P. cannot land a presidential candidate in the White House in 1912 without the backing of a thoroly organized and dis ciplined industrial organization to sysematically and scientifically take possession of the industries of the country. You know the I. W. W. represented the industrial wing of the movement until it was disrupted and betrayed by the physical forcist element or pure and sim ple physical force management represented by Vincent St. John, William Trautmann and company. Can you reorganize an industrial union inside of four years to back up a political movement along Socialist lines? It doesn't look that way to me. Now, I have failed to see that the Socialist party even stands for the indus trial side of the co-operative movement to attain the final goal, and I realize that our efforts will be but love's labor

A well managed army has its right and left wing, and the general who does not act along that line will be outflanked by the enemy any time.

I for one do not care to go into a company where all the principles essential to success are not employed. Your education is good in so far as the political side of the question is concerned, except where, since the last Chicago convention, you would exclude proletarian immigration, which is counter to the idea of International Socialism and the universal brotherhood of the proletarian class uovement, and is also contrary to the international spirit of uniting the two Socialist parties in any country. Now you have broken faith with International Socialism by rejecting a proposition of unity with the S. L. P. If I cannot keep faith with the principles involved in the tory Club for 1912, then I for one will not join it.

Yes, I say your education is good from tne political side of the question, with the exception of the defects just pointed out; but damned be a management that mits half the strategy necessary for victory. I am for education, and education all along the line. But it seems to me you only stand for tactics without strategy. What if I were to farm by only sowing the seed, and leave the science of cultivation out of sight, do you suppose I could or would have any grain to reap? I guess not. Or, what f you would employ a man to grow the grain and then ontit to furnish him the necessary machinery to harvest it. Would not the labor expended in tilling the soil and seeding be lost?

Books might be written on this topic, but this is enough to show why I cannot make up my mind to join you in the 1912 Victory Club with any idea of confidence in your movement. But I will say that I am ready to help carry out the Socialist education covering all the principles involved in the movement.

In conclusion I will say that I cannot help being astonished that such bright men as yourself, Leffingwell, Wayland, Debs, and others, fail to grasp the above mentioned points as paramount to the success of the Socialist movement.

I am, yours for the revolution all along the practical lines so indispensable to the successful culmination of the

II. New York, March 5, 1909. Mr. Charles Bonsall

Dear Sir:-Regarding the question you ask if we would publish a reply to the "Address of the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Labor Party," which appeared in the Weekly People, January 9, 1969, I would say that, as a general principle, replies to anything that appears in The People are welcome. To decide, however, whether a certain reply will be acceptable before it is seen, its length , and other things considered, is another thing.

Your reply under these conditions will receive respectful treatment.

As a matter of course, when I ask any publication if it will print an article, it is, "as a general principle," conceded and understood, that such communication must, in order to be admissible, be clothed in respectful language. In your address, there are numerous absurd allegations, and contradictions in logic. Perhaps I am prejudiced, but past observation and experience make me believe that an answer to said address would not receive fair treatment, and we will drop the matter, with my apology for asking the question.

Yours truly, Charles Bonsall.

HOW TO JOIN THE SUCIALIST LABOR PARTY.

All persons desiring to attach them selves to the Socialist Labor Party, either by the formation of a local organization known as a "Section." or by joining as members at large, may proceed, as follows:

1. Seven or more persons may form a "Section," provided they subscribe to the platform and constitution of the S. L. P., belong to no other political

2. Isolated persons, unable to find six others to join with them in organizing a "Section," but desiring to become members, may do so by becoming members at large by signing an application card, subscribing thereon to the platform and constitution of the S. W. S. T., CAMBRIDGE, MASS .-Whether rights are "natural," or not, is a question that can interest only idle minds. The fact is that no "right" is enjoyed until conquered; that no "right" conquered until a clear conception is obtained thereof; and, finally, that no clear conception is ever obtained of a "right" striven after until economic conditions have shifted so as to shape the conception. This is the practical aspect of the question.

For the identical reason a craft union, however Socialist its members, is also a mob when it comes to the revolutionary act of assuming the reins of production. For the same reason that individual good soldiers must be organized into an army before they can become effective, the wealth-producing and service rendering population, although individually So cialists, must be organized into the Industrially-constructed economic organi zation before they can become effective. G. G., PHOENIX, ARIZ .- No question about that. To shut one's eyes to corruption in the movement would greatly promote the comfort of the movement for a time. It is like avoiding to leap over the hurdles in a race by pushing them forward. The point will finally have to be reached when the hurdles pushed forward, can be pushed no more and then all will have to be jumped together-and the neck of the movement broken in the impossible attempt. The only "one thing at a time" admissible in a revolutionary movement is the meeting of corrupt endeavors one by one, as they arise.

G. W., SO. EASTON, MASS,-The article "Will Socialists Sell Out?" unquestionably represents the attitude of the Socialist Labor Party, at the time of its writing and now. W. A., BUTTE, MONT .- Is it ingenuous on the part of people who oppose immigration on the ground that they would not marry their daughters to a Jap? Obviously not. Why not? Because these people befog the issue with matter that is foreign to the economic issue, the only real issue. So likewise it does not betoken ingenuousness to condone slummery on the ground of the manifold imperiections of the best of men. There is a deep and wide chasm between human foibles and the faulty life of the slummist which consist in habitual fraud, and thereby habitually sponging on the proletariat-Faults in the life breed errors in the

D. B. M., GRANITE, OKLA .- Now to your sixth question-

The modern era of development affected the class lines during its early advance in the same way in which one river, carrying certain sediments, affects, at its confluence, the river that it flows into, and the sediments of which are of different nature. At the early era of this as of the preceding social systems class lines are so embryonic that they are hardly perceptible.

He also thought so, and made a mess of it.

F. E. M., GRANITE, OKLA,-Now to

your third question-The means by which the present system is to be overthrown-understanding by "means" that which will execute the revolutionary act-is the industrially and class-consciously organized wealth-producing and useful servicerendering population. Extending the meaning of "means" to embrace the means towards the means of the industrial organization-then, that means is the clear-as-a-pike Socialist political party, without which the industrial organization could not recruit its forces, because, without it, the industrial organization could not preach the revolution without immediately degenerating and collapsing into an Anarchist aggregation of slummists. TION OF THE PARIS COMMUNE.

C. E. Warner, New Haven, Conn. .. 2

Section Cleveland, Socialist Labor Party, has completed arrangements for its Grand Commemoration of the Paris Commune which takes place SUNDAY, March 21st, at Acme Hall, (formerly Germania Hall), on East 9th street (old Erie street), between Central and Woodland avenues. Program commences at 3 p. m. sharp and consists of Concert music by Boehm's Orchestra, songs by male chorus, solo songs, recitations in English; German and other languages, instrumental selos, comedy acts and, as the "headliner," a one-act play in German by Richard Koeppel, entitled "Ein Verlorener" (A Ruined Life) in which the auther shows the social and economical 1.00 causes of crime. All the different parts are in the hands of talented comrades 1.00 who have shown on numerous former occasions that they are "at home" on the stage. The play will be followed by a Grand Tableau, another feature that has helped to make the Commune festivals of the Cleveland comrades "famous."

After the program -Ball. Refreshments of all kinds will be served and an all around good time awaits all who come: Tickets for gentleman and lady are 25 cents in advance, and can be had from all members and at office of German party organ, "Volksfreund," 1566 Ontario street, near St. Clair avenue. Tickets at the door 50 cents. Comrades and friends! The net pro ceeds of this affair go to the general agitation fund of Section Cleveland and we therefore hope that our friends will turn out in full force and bring their friends The Committee. and shopmates.

TO ABROGATE THE RUSSIAN EXTRADITION TREATY.

[The below petition is issued by the Pouren Defence Conference, 99 Nassau street, Room 710, New York City, to whom it should be returned when full. It enlists the sympathy of all right-minded men.]

The preceedings under the Extradition Treaty with Russia against Christian Rudowitz and Jan Janoff Pouren have amply demonstrated that this treaty endangers; if it does not entirely destroy, the safety of political refugees from the

Both these cases have revealed an embarrassing conflict of two standards of justice: Russian and American.

Contrary to the theory and practice of American jurisprudence, the accused were, in fact, compelled to furnish proof of their innocence. Under the extradition law, no provision is made for bail; in consequence Jan Janoff Pouren has been imprisoned for more than a year, pending the decision of his case.

In extradition cases the issue of fact is not submitted to the verdiet of a jury. It is decided by an inferior federal official, sometimes a lay magistrate, who may not even be learned in the Russia may base her demands upon documentary proof obtained in a preliminary examination, in which all safeguards of the rights of the accused are absent. The documentary proof submitted by the Russian government need not under the Russian laws be sworn to; such evidence would be incompetent in any criminal proceeding originating in our own territory.

The defence, on the other hand, must rely upon witnesses, who are compelled on cross-examination to answer questions that cannot honorably be answered, because to do so would mean to betray their comrades who are still within the reach of the Czar's police.

Thus the time-honored right of political asylum is reduced to a mockery.

In view of the foregoing, the undersigned petition the United States Senate to cause due notice of termination of the Convention for the extradition of criminals, made in 1893, to be given to the Imperial Government of Russia.
