THE REFERENDUM IN TURKEY

With an eye to America, where the majority party in Congress has declined a non-aggression pact with Turkey, and is feeling the pressure of reality, the question of the question of the referendum in Turkey is being hotly discussed. The government of Turkey has been forced to take a stand on this matter, and it is believed that the resolution of the situation may be of great assistance to the American war effort.

According to reports from Ankara, the government has decided to hold a referendum on the question of joining the League of Nations. The referendum will be held on the 15th of November, and it is expected that a large majority of the population will vote in favor of joining the League.

The decision of the government is based on the belief that Turkey's membership in the League will strengthen its position in international affairs and enhance its prestige. It is also believed that Turkey's membership in the League will help to stabilize the political situation in the Near East and reduce the risk of conflict.

In conclusion, it can be said that the referendum in Turkey is a significant event that will have far-reaching implications for the region and the world. The outcome of the referendum will be closely watched by all interested parties, and it is expected that the decision will be a turning point in the history of Turkey and the Middle East.
THE IRON COLLAR
By EUGENE SUE
Translated from the Original French by DANIEL DE LEON

This story depicts slavery under the Romans—an institution fraught with terrors, with outrages and with its visitations. The epoch of the story is that immediately preceding the Christian era, when the frightful cruelties of the Roman aristocracy filled the measure of suffering to overflowing, and paved the way for the gospel of revolt propounded by the Carpenter of Nazareth. THE IRON COLLAR is one of Sue's greatest works."

OFF-HAND ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

W. J. BROWN, M. D., 450 W. 66th St., New York City.

To: Mr. Brown, New York City.

Your letter asking why, according to the New York Times, The Museum of Modern Art, New York, has received a grant from the Carnegie Corporation, is quite interesting.

The Carnegie Corporation, as you stated, has a large endowment which is used to support various educational and cultural institutions throughout the United States. It is within their power to give grants to institutions that they believe will have a positive impact on society. The Museum of Modern Art is one such institution that has been supported by the Carnegie Corporation.

As for why they chose to give a grant to this particular museum, it is not uncommon for the Carnegie Corporation to give grants to institutions that are working towards the advancement of culture and the arts. The Museum of Modern Art is known for its role in promoting modern art and artists, and the Carnegie Corporation may have seen this as a worthy cause to support.

I hope this information helps to answer your question. If you have any further questions, please do not hesitate to ask.

Sincerely,
