Report to International Congress
Copenhagen, August, 1910

Emerging from the Socialist Labor Party of Australia

Concerned with All Lands—Gaining to our labor and our fellow workers—concered with all lands, we see the development of the working class on a world-wide scale. The inspiration of the socialist movement comes from the working class itself, arising in every country and from every section of that class. The socialist movement is a world-wide movement, and the International Workingman's Alliance was founded in London in 1864, with the object of uniting the working class of the world in a single and irresistible force. The first efforts of the Alliance were directed towards the establishment of international working men's associations. These associations were formed in many different countries, and they gradually increased in number and strength. The Alliance was dissolved in 1876, but its work continued and the International Workingmen's Association was formed in 1889. This organization consists of delegates from different countries, who meet together to discuss the problems of the working class and to decide upon policies for the future.

The International Workingmen's Association's programme is based on the principles of socialism, which are: the abolition of the existing social order; the establishment of a free and equal society based on the common ownership of the means of production; the right of all to work; and the right of all to be free from oppression and exploitation. The Association aims to educate the working class in these principles, and to organize them into a powerful force for social change. The International Workingmen's Association is the forerunner of the International Socialist League, which was formed in 1890. This organization is composed of the socialist labor parties of different countries, and it has the same aims and purposes as the International Workingmen's Association. The International Socialist League is the world-wide federation of the socialist labor parties, and it is the instrument by which the international working class is organizing itself for the fight against the ruling class. The socialist labor parties are the vanguard of the international working class, and they are the instruments by which the international working class is organizing itself for the fight against the ruling class.

But the propaganda is Working like What It Could and Should Be.

On the whole more propaganda work was done last week, but all this made what it could and should be expected already.

This week the workers in the W.S.P. are the keynotes of the organized American public activity in the work of propaganda.

Recently we said that the successful open air meeting, from which no subscriptions resulted, was not a success.

These results are not surprising, but that the public has not yet awakened to the propaganda of the W.S.P.

Conrad Rodehutscord, who is in Wisconsin, goes into towns where the work has been done last week, and the demand for literature only begins to get active in the work of propaganda.

The State of Massachusetts came first and was the only state to be given subscriptions last week. There are in the field very much as we were told to expect.

The hall meetings are well attended and the people are enthusiastic.

The sale of our literature has been going on good volumes. Society activities have been taken up.
