WHAT "NEUTRALITY" AMOUNTS TO

Among the "international Trade Unions" which, according to the Socialist League, claims to be the largest and strongest body, is the "International Workingmen's Association," or "International," as it is commonly known. This body has as its object the promotion of the interests of all workingmen throughout the world, and it is said to be represented in nearly every country by local sections or branches.

The New York Labor News Company, a publication devoted to the interests of the working class, has published a pamphlet entitled "The New York Labor News Company," which contains an analysis of the situation in the United States and abroad, and a detailed account of the various measures taken by the "International" to further the interests of the working class.

The pamphlet concludes with a call for "International" sympathizers to join in the struggle for the abolition of capital and the establishment of a classless society. It emphasizes the importance of solidarity among workers and the need for unity in the face of the forces of reaction.

"International," or the “International Workingmen’s Association,” is a term used by Karl Marx to describe a group of workers who, in 1864, formed a union to promote the interests of working-class people. The term is often associated with the labor movement, and it continues to be used today to refer to organizations that advocate for workers' rights and social justice.

CRISES IN EUROPEAN HISTORY

By GUSTAV BANG

The French Revolution

In the year 1789, the French Revolution broke out. It was the beginning of a period of turmoil that lasted for more than a century and a half. The crises of war and revolution, the political and social upheavals, were not only a result of the economic and political conditions of the time, but also of the human capacity for change, for adaptation, for growth. The French Revolution was a product of the Enlightenment, a period of intellectual awakening that had led to the rise of political ideas that emphasized the rights of man and the need for a just society. It was a revolution that transformed the political landscape of Europe, and it is a story that continues to be relevant today.

The Sword of Honor

By EUGENE SUE

A patchwork story, vividly depicting the clashing interests which dictated and carried out the great French Revolution, and seated the then rising bourgeoisie, now capitalist class, in the saddle from which it hurled the outward system of feudalism. The 18th of Bon's wonderful historico-fiction series.

I ILLINOIS MINER REPORT

NUMBER OF FATAL ACCIDENTS INCREASED - IDLENESS CUTS SMALL FIGURE IN PRODUCTION.

In its issue of November 24, the Workers' World, published by the Socialist Labor Party, issued a summary of the Illinois report on coal mining. It states that despite the fact that the report for 1916 has not been released, the number of fatal accidents in the state has increased, as the result of idle plant, work stoppages, and the general depression. In the state of Illinois, there were 13,311 fatal injuries reported in 1916, as compared with 10,931 for 1915, a decrease of 21.8 per cent. The number of fatal accidents in the state of Illinois, for the year 1916, was 13,311, or 10.9 per cent less than the number of fatal accidents in the state of Illinois, for the year 1915, when there were 14,941 fatal injuries. III. The French Revolution

The year 1789 is remembered as the year of the French Revolution, a period of social and economic upheaval that lasted for over a century. The causes of the Revolution were many, but the most significant were the economic and social conditions that existed in France at the time. The Revolution was a result of the failure of the government to address the needs of the people, and the rising tide of popular discontent.

ROOSEVELT FACT AND FABLE

Swatted Industries to Be Swatted in New York City

A striking exhibit of underdog with underdog, without a doubt, was held yesterday in the arcades of the Fifth Avenue Building, on the corner of 42nd Street.

For there were, indeed, wheat growers, farm owners, and small shopkeepers, a group of farmers, who had been treated unfairly by the government, who had been swatted by the government, and who had been swatted by the government.

In 1906, the government, in the name of the tariff, had smacked wheat growers with a tariff that was known as the "Greenback tariff." The government had imposed an 8-cent tariff on wheat, and had destroyed the wheat growers' ability to compete in the world market. The wheat growers had been swatted by the government, and had been swatted by the government, and had been swatted by the government.

Communist Manifesto

"The Communist Manifesto," written by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, is considered one of the most important works of political philosophy. The manifesto outlines the basic principles of communism, including the idea that the forces of production are owned by the working class, and that the means of production are the basis of all social relations. The manifesto also calls for the overthrow of the capitalist system, and the establishment of a classless society.
