The shoe workers have not been idle, but have been concerned in a number of strikes and struggles, some of them more or less successful. They have been in the forefront of the struggle for better working conditions and wages, and have been active in the labor movement, both in this country and abroad. Their addresses, therefore, are of great interest and importance. The addresses of Mr. W. R. McInturf, the General President of the Socialist Labor Party, are particularly noteworthy. They contain valuable information and ideas, and are a valuable contribution to the cause of labor.

At the session held May 11th, Congress of Industrial Organization (CIO) members and other labor leaders gathered at the Hotel Statler to listen to the speeches of the leaders of the CIO.

In his opening address, President John L. Lewis emphasized the importance of unity among the workers and called for a stronger bargaining machine to protect the interests of the workers.

The meeting was followed by a series of discussions on various issues facing the workers, including the need for improved wages and working conditions.

On May 12th, the CIO members met again to discuss the results of the previous session and to plan for the next steps in the campaign.
