THE EIGHTEENTH BRUJAIRE OF LOUIS NAPOLEON.

By E. B. MAX.

[Translated from the German by The People.]

I.

NB. I respectfully beg leave to inform all the English-speaking readers that I have in the course of my work on the history of Louis Napoleon, and particularly on the "Brujaire," the month of October, and the "October Thieves," have been greatly benefited by the communications of Mr. F. J. S., the Nephew of the Duke. The paternal relations between us were also made known. Mr. F. J. S. was born in 1841, and was a close friend of the Duke's, as far as I have been able to learn from his works. He has also written a number of letters to me, which I have found very useful. The Duke himself has shown me some of his works, which I have had the pleasure of reading, and I can assure you that they are very interesting and instructive. The Duke has also given me the use of his library, which contains a vast number of books, and I have had the opportunity of reading many of them. I can only say that the Duke was a very good friend of mine, and I am very grateful for his kindness.

II.

The Charles-September revolution of 1848 is a subject of vast importance. This revolution was the first step towards the establishment of the German Empire, and it was the last step taken by the Prussian revolution of 1848. The revolution of 1848 was a true revolution, and it was the result of the work of a great number of men, who, by their bravery and their energy, had succeeded in overthrowing the old régime, and in establishing a new régime, which was founded on the principles of liberty and equality. The revolution of 1848 was a revolution of the people, and it was the result of the work of the people. It was the result of the work of the working-class, who, by their courage and their heroism, had succeeded in overthrowing the old régime, and in establishing a new régime, which was founded on the principles of liberty and equality.
