AGGRESSIVENESS Its Successfulness in the Detroit: Mich., Campaign.

CAPITALISTS and ANARCHISTS

Emma Goldman Nailed and thereby both the Capitalists and Anarchists She is Invited by the Capitalist Par-tics to Detroit and is Boomed by them, and Admits that She Objects to the Prospect of Proletarian Rule Because that Would Interfere With Capitalist

DETROIT, Nov. 21.—Comrades of THE PEOPLE:—The official returns give us 541 votes for Charles Erb for Mayor. In spite of the fact that the old Mayor. In spite of the fact that the old parties lost about 40 per cent. of the votes of last fall, the Socialist Labor Party gained over 200 votes: more than doubling its percentage of the total vote, which is 1½ per cent. The vote was lighter than it would have been had the weather been passable, but it just poured all day on election day. The Socialist Labor Party came out open against "business principles," and its literature was revolutionary to the

its literature was revolutionary to the core, asking for straight class political action.

We attacked Collins, Jeffries and Sherman, most especially on the ground that they had either been very promi-nently connected with so-called labor troubles or because they, as "would-be Socialists," tried to sail into office under the reform mask of capitalism. As our attacks and our platform and declara-tion of principles were not expected by the capitalist parties to be so straight to the point, they first seemed to be paralyzed by the same, but they soon revived and set to work to parry our blows. The men we had attacked were dropped, and the cry for "non-partisan, business principles" and tactics was raised. It became a fight between So-cialism and Capitalism. The Democialism and Capitalism. The Demo-crats and the Republicans had the very same platform, and even the "American Party" joined in the cry "cheap taxes and business principles." The papers started to boom the "best" candidates; regardless of party affiliation, the poli-ticians held shop meetings, and even Governor Pingree was one of the speakers out daily speaking to the employees of the different factories during working hours as well as at noon hours.

t the main work was done in or tain parts of the city where the capital-ist politicians scented the danger of a high vote for the S. L. P. There they held meetings every evening, and some times several meetings were held within a few blocks of each other, and if no hall could be procured the saloon or a back room with a barrel or two of beer on tap, answered the purpose. Governor Pingree spoke even at these meetings. Signs inscribed as follows were mounted on wagons and paraded along the streets of the city:

streets of the city: "Vote for Maybury; he wants low taxes, more work, more factories and business interests protected." "He is a good enough Mayor for me!" Signed, C. Black, Rep. Can. for Mayor. It was a fight for employment for all the unemployed, at $2 a day of eight hours as a minimum, and taxation sufficient to enable the accomplishment of the above mentioned task on the Soof the above mentioned task on the Socialist side, and on the capitalist side-all parties alike-for low taxation, discharge of all superfluous city help, etc. Together with the above mentioned demand, the Socialist Labor Party of De trolt reaffirmed its allegiance to the National platform of the S. L. P. of the United States of America, and had sev eral other minor demands of a munici-pal nature for its municipal platform. All the way through the capitalist parties were forced to pledge them-selves to the open support of capital. while the Socialist Labor party came out straight for the wage working class and against"business principles and in-This is the first time that we succeeded in forcing the capitalist parties to show their colors openly. We argued that it was useless to get any-body elected unless the workers underand perfectly what they would have a perfectly what they start to op-the business interests, the cries of cap-liantst mouth-pieces might drive the Tailist mouth-pieces might drive the workers to reaction. We see now that, although only two or three weeks have and since the election, while Mayor-ect Maybury and the business men are doing their utmost to follow up their election cry, Mr. Pingree is re-acting, because he finds that since the taxes in the small business men's and workingmen's districts have to be raised order to let the large business men to free, the small fellows and the wage orkers will find out that business incrests are not their interests, that they nust necessarily react from their for-ner decision, and that this must necess willy drive them into the S. L. P. be Cluse it-the S, L. P.-was the only party that opposed these principles. As may be expected, the workers vot-of for the "best men." as they were told to by the capitalistic mouthpieces. William C. Maybury, Democrat, was cted Mayor; J. A. Schmid, Rep., City erk: William B. Thompson, Dem., City reasurer; Felix A. Lempkie, Rep., Jus-ce of the Peace, and the other offices re distributed proportionally between main "factionist" leaders of the pitalist parties." The point we learned by the last elecs that the capitalistic parties -re-or otherwise-will only then drop sub of deceit when they recognize the opponent is actually a foe, and clear him they will resort to any are within their reach. But this best part of this kind of fighting, they shoot away their ammunition the skirmish, when they play their by cards now and loose ground, in near final round up, deprived of only remaining defense, they will shally defenseless,

The capitalist parties made desperate campe'gn to regain their enormous loss of last spring. They judged correctly that it was due to So cialist agitation, and they feared that the Socialist Labor party might attract these apostates for good. They thought they could dishearten us and wipe us out, since no other means seemed to be at hand to stop the vehement attacks the Socialists made upon the capitalist politicians' actions; the only result accomplished is that they tore off their own mask. But it seems now that, since the bamboozling arts of the capitalistic political hirelings have failed on the workers, another set of fakirs is now to be employed.

The Anarchist, Emma Goldman, was here. In New York, on the one hand, she seems to be superfluous because the politician is still successfully utilizing the votes of a large part of the prole-tariat to entrench capital, and, on the other hand, because she finds too much solidarity and education among the revolutionary part of the proletariat to be of any service to the capitalist class But in Detroit, with from twenty thou-sand to thirty thousand workingmen voters running about who have become apostatical, and may at any time make up their mind that they want to help their Socialist Comrades in fighting the exploiters, there she and her kind may employed to good advantage. "Der me Teufel" suddenly overflows with Arme proletarian revolutionary feelings, the same as it did before the last Anarch-istic outburst, although it has since boomed capitalistic reformers and ad-vocated "free love"—probably because he thinks that when the workers live on love "FREE." they live so much cheaper than now that the whole amount of their wages can be added to the surplus value (fleecings) pocketed by the cap-italist class. This "Arme Teufel" ("poor Devil") was again used as the cat's paw to influence a workingmen's organiza-tion to invite Emma Goldman to Detroit. She spoke at the 11th of Novem ber celebration and lectured in a church and several other places afterwards. Her talk showed plainly that the purpose of her visit was to catch the work ers who broke away from the capitalis politicians by throwing around with radical sounding phrases and condemn-ing the politicians for the purpose of confusing the minds of the workers in regard to the distinction between politicians and the fearless agitators who spend their life time to separate the enemies from the friends of labor. Then, when the purpose shall have been Then, when the purpose shall have been accomplished, when a R. Reitzel. H. Weisman and Emma Goldman shall have succeeded in rounding up the ob-stinate voting cattle, when they have succeeded in becoming "anti-political leaders," "ANARCHISTIC LEADERS," then there is no more danger that the then there is no more danger that the rank and file of the dissatisfied workers will meet the revolutionary forces of th Socialists, and they may successfully be led back into the capitalist parties The following are remarks of Miss

Goldman to questions put to her:

"The politicians and the Socialists, too, all want office; they all sell out; it is the politician who sold out to the capitalists the advantages the people revolution fought for during former the proletariat has again been enslaved

Question: "Although the proletariat was insignificant during the days of the French and the American revolutions, although the aim of the revolution was the overthrow of the feudal regime and the establishment of the rule of the bourgeoisie, and although the fullgrown bourgeoisie or capitalist class controls all the powers of government, the judicial and executive, as well as the legislative powers as has only lately been demonstrated during the coa miners' strike, although the represen coal tatives of the bourgeoisie have made the bourgeoisie powerful, and have made and enforced laws that have enabled it to very greatly enlarge the proletariat or wage-working class, enabling the bourgeoisie to utilize its individual ownership right to the means of pro-duction and distribution to live upon the toil of the proletariat, all these facts notwithstanding, do you want to uphold your claim that the bourgeois politician has betrayed the trust put in him by the bourgeoisie? Miss Goldman: "No! But should the proletariat elect their own representa-tives to power, they would make laws and enforce them in the interest of the proletariat only: THIS WOULD TAKE. AWAY THE LIBERTY OF THE OTHERS." OTHERS." After giving this answer, Miss Gold-man and the chairman of the meeting absolutely refused to allow any more questions from the first inquirer, and answered to the audience: "Yes! this is the point I wanted you to acknowl-edge; we Socialists want to take away from the others-the capitalist class-the liberty to enslave and fleece labor." Another questioner: "Don't you talk to awaken hopeless discontent and make to awaken hopeless discontent and maximum the workers the servile slaves of cap-italism, servile because they see no out-way? How do you imagine that the workers could return to individual pro-duction in the large modern factories. where the workers are inter-dependent and co-operative in production?" Miss Goldman tried to answer by throwing Goldman tried to answer by throwing out some disconnected phrases, but, as if led by some unseen power, without finishing or trying to satisfy the in-quirer, she suddenly disappeared from the stage and did not return! The capitalist press howled because the "Socialist Meannerchor" refused to sing at the 11th of November celebra-tion if Miss Goldman should speak there. THEY BOOMED HER ALL THE WAY THROUGH one way or the other, but they did not mention a word about the trap into which she walked by her answer admitting that Anarch-ists want to protect capitalists. Detroit is awake! Yes! We have learned to recognize "Capitalism" no matter what garb it wears. To recog-nize it enables us to parry its blows and to force it into the corner, whence no out some disconnected phrases, but, a to force it into the corner, whence no more escape for it is possible. DINNER TO GENERAL GOBIN.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Nov. 5-The dinner tendered to Brigadier General J. P. S. Gobin, Commander of the Third Brigade of the National Guard of Pennsylvania, at the Harrisburg Club tonight, was a brilliant success. It was a compliment to the General by the members of his staff, and was a sequel of the recent campaign at Hazleton during the strike.

The staff is composed of Major Milton A. Gherst, of Lebanon, Assistant Adjutant General; Major William S. Millar. of Scranton, Inspector; Major James W. Oakford, of Scranton, Judge Advocate; Major Henry P. Moyer, of Lebanon, Quartermaster; Major Simon B. Cameron, of Marietta, Commissary of Subsistence: Major William H. Egle, of Harrisburg, Surgeon; Major William P. Clarke, of Williamsport, Ordnance Officer; Captain Abner W. Shultz, of Lebanon, Aide-de-Camp; Captain A. Wilson Norris, of Harrisburg, Aide-de-Camp; and First Lieutenant George H. Halberstadt, of Pottsville, who acted as Brigade Surgeon during the tour of duty at Hazleton.

The invited guests who were present in addition to General Gobin, were Governor Daniel H. Hastings, Brigadier General Thomas J. Stewart, Adjutant General of Pennsylvania; Colonel Frank J. Magee, of Wrightsville, commanding Eighth Regiment Infantry, N. G. P .; Colonel James B. Coryell, of Williamsport, commanding Twelfth Regiment Infantry, N. G. P.; Colonel David Brainard Case, of Marietta, commanding Fourth Regiment, N. G. P.; Colonel Henry A. Coursen, of Scranton, commanding Thirteenth Regiment, N. G. P.; Colonel C. Bow Dougherty, of Wilkesbarre, commanding Ninth Regiment Infantry, N. G. P.; Captain Alexis R. Paxton. Fifteenth Infantry, United States Army, who was attached to Third Brigade headquarters during the Hazleton riots, and Captain Frederick M. Ott, who commanded the squadron of cavalry upon the same occasion. Captain John C. Groome, of Philadelphia, of the First City Troop, was unable to be present owing to his absence in the West, and Captain John Denithorne, of Phœnixville, commanding Battery C, N. G. P., who would have been an honored guest, died three days ago.

The dinner was given in the assembly hall of the Harrisburg Club, which had beet tastefully decorated for the occasion. A large picture of General Gobin, taken while he was at Hazleton. was hung above one end of the table. and from the gallery of the hall was displayed a handsome new brigade flag. while a liberal display of the nationa colors was in every part of the hall The good effect produced by the bunt-ing was enhanced by a number of plants distributed throughout the hall. The table was decorated in an original and effective manner. At one end, immedi-ately in front of the guest of honor, was a floral cannon of red, white and blue, while at the other end of the table was a blue keystone, the emblem of the Third Brigade.

DIED OF HUNGER.

Mrs. Isabel Hatschatcher, a widow, 63 years old, who lived alone for many years in a single room of a rear house at 139 Ten Eyck street, Williamsburg, N. Y., was found dead Monday night by Mrs. Susie Schepp, a distant relative Coroner Nason made an investigation yesterday, and was of the opinion that the woman died of starvation. Mrs. Hatschatcher's husband died twenty years ago, and her five children died a few months later. Until about two years ago, when her sight failed. Mrs. Hats-chatcher was able to support herself by doing tailoring work. Last summer doing tailoring work. Last summer Mrs. Hatschatcher fell behind in her rent. She vainly tried to pay up. She earned 65 cents last week, and sent 50 cents to the-landlord's agent. On Sunday night, when Mrs. Hats chatcher was seen last, she seemed to be downcast. Her failure to appear before twilight on Monday night caused alarm, and Mrs. Schepp was sent after her. She was unable to enter the old woman's room, and Policeman Klein forced in the door. Mrs. Hatschatcher was dead in her bed. On the floor near the door was an unopened letter from the landlord's attorney, warning the woman that unless the rent for her room was paid be fore noon to-day she would be dispos-sessed. The letter was probably shoved under the door by a letter carrier after Mrs. Hatschatcher was already dead.

LITTLE ONES FOUND STARVING.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17 .- Three small , all under 8 years of age, children found alone in a house at 953 Fortysecond street, yesterday, where they had been for two days, poorly clothed and without any food. Their faces were pinched and they were shivering from exposure during the recent cold weather, while the period of forty-eight hours' fasting had made them so weak that they were unable to walk. The children are Charles, William and Lizzie Weaver. They are 8, 5 and 3 years old respectively. On Sunday morning their mother left them in their ome, saying that she was going out in earch of food. There was not a morsel eat in the house, nor an atom of coal

Yesterday morning Barney McBride. 527 Root street, heard feeble cries coming from the Weaver home. He entered the house and found the children huddled together in a dark corner of the kitchen. Charles, the oldest, related the story of their distress.

The little ones told the officer at the Stock-Yards Station that their father was dead and that their mother was a washerwoman, who had worked hard, but that her customers had recently abandoned her one by one until none was left

At the same time little Martha Hoffler, 7 years old, daughter of Mrs. Rosie Hoffler, 5107 Sherman street, was also found starving. The child was left in the Stock-Yards Station yesterday by her aunt, Mrs. Murphy, who said that the mother disappeared on Sunday night. Fourteen small ch'ildren, de-serted by extremely poor parents, have been found by the Stock-Yards police in night. the last three weeks.

DIED OF STARVATION.

TROY, N. Y. Nov. 20.-About 9 o'clock yesterday morning a man about 60 years old, who is supposed to have been Michael Quinn, a laborer, of this city, fell to the sidewalk in front of 200 Worth etteret An embulance was sum Worth street. An ambulance was sum moned, and the man, who was in an un-conscious condition, was taken to Hud-Street Hospital, where he died a short time after being admitted. The hospital doctors gave the cause of death as "general collapse," but it is supposed that the autopsy will disclose that he died of starvation.

PUNCTURED. An Incautious Capitalist Promptly Caught.

There is in Brooklyn, among other curiosities, a "Philosophical Society." Some good people have not yet seen through it, and are among its directors. For the rest it is run by that queer class of people, the superficiality of whose knowledge runs a stiff race with their vanity. These gentlemen have some good features about them. Among their good features is to furnish entertainment free to those who care for it. Every Sunday a roomy hall is open to visitors, and there a pow-wow can be had free, gratis, and for nothing.

As a matter of course, the stock lectures furnished by the society belong to that class of intellectual prodigies whose philosophy consists in an elaborate and well trained ignorance of the Social or Labor Question, seasoned with atheistic pedantry. The lectures delivered by these philosophers may not be what a carping critic may want; they surely are a source of much enjoyment to the knowing ones. Like Falstaff, who was not only witty himself, but cause that wit was in others, these lectures are not only mirthful themselves, but cause that mirth is in others. Quite recently this fact was strikingly illustrated.

A certain Dr. W. A. Croffut, of Wash-A certain Dr. W. A. Cromut, of Wash-ington, was the lecturer. He held forth on the question: "Is Congress the Enemy of Plenty? The lecturer did ample justice to the queer tille of his defined. From beginning to end it was address. From beginning to end it was address. From beginning to end it was queerness queered. In, the course thereof he was suddenly stopped by a voice from the audience. It proceeded from Comrade Thomas A. Hickey, who from Comrade Thomas A. Hickey, who sonorously cried out, pointing his finger at the speaker: "I take the job, sir!" The speaker was disconcerted, the philosophical owls were scandalized; but the audience delightedly wheeled in line with our Comrade. Nor did the episode end there. Now, what was it that had caused Comrade Hickey's im-passioned interpellation? This is what had happened: had happened:

Dr. Croffut was voluptuously bowling Dr. Croffut was voluptionsly bowling along his round phrases of unmeaning words, stout paddings of wild asser-tions, and triumphantly idiotic refuta-tions of Socialist claims when he is the the price of farm labor has gone up. In my father's time he could get all the laborers he wanted, strong young trishmen who could speak good young Irishmen, who could speak good English, for \$8 a month and their board. To-day my brother is working that same Connecticut farm that my father had, and he has to pay from \$16 to \$24 a month to a lot of Poles, who, as he says, don't know the difference betwee horse and a hoe handle. 'I wish,' my brother only the other day, 'that I could get Americans to work on my farm. I'd willingly pay them $\frac{825}{2}$ a month and give them the best board any one could desire.'" It was at this point that Comrade Hickey, unable to contain himself any longer at the sight of such a job, cried

"I take the job, sir!" Dr. Croffut was taken at his word, and, as always in such cases, defaulted. and, as always in such cases, defaulted, He was a stranger in Brooklyn; did not know that among the audience at the "Philosophic Society" there are oc-casionally some who are not "philoso-phers," and he got caught. His yarn about wages at his brother's farm was a pretty, fiction to entertain philosoa pretty fiction to entertain philoso-phers. In vain did Comrade Hickey try to make an appointment with Dr. Croffut to clinch the bargain. The Dr. vamosed the ranch.

SQUIRMINGS Of Members of Pur and Simpledom in Buffalo.

A Labor Fakir; of the Boot and Shoemakers' Union Who is Both Boss and Agent for Workingmen-Another, Who Challenges the Socialist Labor Party and the Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance to a Debate, Shows the White Feather and is Pilloried as a Cowardly Crook.

BUFFALO, Nov. 30 .- It is well worth noticing the means that are adopted by the local "pure and simple" shoemakers union of this town in its efforts to prevent the organization of a class-conscious union of the trade. I shall not mention all the instances, but shall content myself with one.

The "Arbeiter Zeitung," a local Anarchist paper, publishes an article laying a boycott upon a shoe firm in this place. At the same time the names of four of our Comrades are published as "expelled" from the union. The two items are so worded as though our Comrades had been working in that shop. and had refused to aid the union in a conflict with the employer over a reduction of wages, and had, consequently, been excluded from the union 'as "scabs."

Now the fact is that these four Comrades do not at all work in that shop; nor have any conflicts about wages taken place in that shop. All the trouble arises from the boss' not caring any longer to use the old union's label.

The milk in the cocoanut is this: The President of that Union No. 13, is himself financially interested in a shoeshop. and seeks to utilize the opportunity to boycott Shoenig & Uhl, so that his own goods may find the readier purchasers. Thus we have this "President" of a union using his unionist office as an agency for his private business, and getting paid for his activity out of the union's treasury. This gentleman is an expert exploiter of labor organizations. as shown by his last year's activity at the Shoemakers' Convention.

As there are employed at Shoenin & Unit's a number of men, who, though not yet members of the new and pre-gressive union, will probably join it, the President Boss of the old union is trying to kill two fleas with one slap. The new union could not tolerate such duality as explicitly and proletarist sciences as capitalist and proletariat, skinner and agent for the skinned. The whole conduct of the clique in No. 13, both in the matter of the ex-pulsion of our Comrades and in that of the boycott, is unconstitutional. Our Comrades inside of the organization Comrades inside of the organization should not find it difficult to see to this.

This also is interesting. It is well known that the Labor Fakir Taggart has challenged the So Laborcialist Labor party and the Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance to a public de-bate. We took upon ourselves all the expenses: hall hire, advertising, etc., the absentee on the occasion was, who? Taggart, the coward and Socialist killer. Now, Mr. Taggart will, it is to be hoped, henceforth ston his brazeling and no henceforth stop his bragging, and no longer claim that he can turn the Socialists down. By not putting in an appearance he has openly confessed that his charges against the Socialist that his charges against the obtains workingmen are untrue; and that theirs against him are true. Despite the bravado of his challenge, despite the fact that he was relieved from all ex-penses, despite all difficulties were re-moved from his way so as to enable him to make good his claims in favor of simpledom and against New Unionism simpledom and against New Unionism, and to prove in public what he has been saying under shelter of in the unions, he found it, as all faisifiers and cowards do, advisable to show the white feather. The time is at hand when the proletariat of Buffalo will re-alize what this means and thank the Socialists for having pillorled this reprobate. The capitalist press now supports this man, as a matter of course. This only helps to expose both bim and it him and it.

The other floral decorations upon the table were beautiful. Two miniature mess tents were features of the table decoration. Major Milton A. Gherst, chief of staff, presided, with General Gobin on his right, and the Governor on his left. Toward the close of the dinner Major Gherst spoke for his fellow officers on the staff, extending to General Gobin the felicities of the occasion. He stated that the dinner was given as a slight token of the esteem in which he was held by the members of his military a slight family. General Gobin feelingly responded.

Governor Hastings complimented the Third Brigade and its commander upon the efficient services rendered the State and all law-abiding citizens during the recent riots in the coal region. He was followed in turn by General Stewart. who voiced the same sentiments, and paid a glowing tribute to the Penn-sylvania Guard. The several regimental commanders were also heard from.

A pleasant episode of the dinner was the presentation of a handsome sword to Major Gherst by the officers of the staff. In presenting the sword Captain A. Wilson Norris, who was the spokesman for his fellow members on the staff, eloquently referred to Major Gherst's record in the War of the Rebellion, to his long and meritorious ser-vice in the Pennsylvania Guard, and to the efficiency he always displayed in the discharge of the exacting duties of the position he now holds.

Altogether it was a delightful oc-casion and a fitting tribute to Brigadier General Gobin, whose record as a soldier, ability as a lawyer and integrity in public office have embodied in him the highest type of American citizenship

All present were in full-dress uni-All present were in full-dress uni-form. The ménu card is a handsome souvenir. On the light blue cover was embossed in white letters the name of each diner, and on the first page a fine photo of General Gobin, with the brigade flag in water colors. The dinner was an elaborate feast, and continued until midnight,

WOMAN FAINTS FROM HUNCER.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10 .- Mrs. George Hart fell fainting from hunger and ex-haustion yesterday in front of Kohl-saat's Clark street lunch-room. She was supported by Dr. J. C. Beach, who tried to prevail upon her to go to the County Hospital, but because of worry over the condition of her family she refused.

Mrs. Hart was waiting for the restaurant to close, having been for some time a beneficiary of the free nightly distribution of food there. Dr. Beach noticed her tottering as he passed, and had just turned to question her when she fell. She was taken into a neighboring store until she revived, and a police ambulance was called voman said that she lived at 264 The Blue Island avenue, and had several children. Her husband was unable to secure employment, and the entire family had been destitute for weeks. the arrival of the ambulance she refused to go to the hospital because she had to meet her husband in order to secure provisions for to-day.

niece of Benjamin Franklin la one of those accidental happenings that seem providential. They seem intended to bring certain facts together as if for the purpose to set the mind working. Homestead is one of those places in the nation where the perfected tool has reached its rarest development. The development of the tool was one of the phenomena that the penetrating mind of Franklin had caught glimpses of. He leaped forward and imagined the time when the tool would be so far perfected that the burden of toil would be wholly raised from the shoulders of man.

Homestead is a monument of the correctness and the incorrectness of Franklin's forecast. It was but recently the battle-field for the forces of Labor, seeking to verify the humane forecast of Lincoln and the forces of Capital, seeking to and succeeding in thwarting them -for a time.

Twenty-five more miles of trolley. franchise have just been granted to the Flynn company in Brooklyn. During the campaign we insisted that, whoever of the capitalists lost the Mayorality, the trolley bosses, all of whom had their men in all the capitalist camps, would be sure to win. Here you have it.

Our special archives, labeled "Kicks at THE PEOPLE," have been enriched this week by a gem. It is the letter of a critic who pronounces THE PEOPLE "mere rubbish," because, as the critic proceeds to say, "it fills its columns with such stuff as 'The Eighteenth Brumaire.' Three cheers for Debs for President."

This collection will be interesting reading at no distant future.

From many sides, and in more languages than one, inquiries have reached this office to ascertain what is the matter with the financial report of the International Cigarmakers' Union. It was due in May. This is December, and its sight has not yet gladdened the eyes and hearts of the expectant multitude.

Wicked inquirers even venture the question whether an organization that was so indignant at the publication of facts and figures that made it out bankrupt, should not hasten to publish the facts to prove it solvent, if solvent it is. We don't know. We wait.

Another batch of inquirers touches upon another question that surprises us they should think we ought to take notice of, to wit, the fate of Mr. Jeems Sovereign. These friends ought to know that Jeems and his crew were not deposed in Louisville, Ky., this year. They were deposed by D. A. No. 49, in New York City on December 15. 1895. On that occasion Jeems, Martin, Maguire, Hayes, and the whole crew was thrown overboard, and by the action of D. A. No. 49 in joining in organizing the Socialist Trade & Labor Alliance, the K. of L. ceased de facto to exist. What happened at Louisville has no significance. It was but a puff of gas escaping from - ---a corpse.

Bourgeois revolutions, like those of the eighteenth century. rush own-ward faster from success to suc-cess, their stage effects outbid one another, mon and things seem to be set in faming brillants, costasis is the prevailing spirit; but they are short-lived, they reach their elimax speedly then society relapses into a long fit of nervous reaction before it learns how to appropriate the another, men and things seem to be a long hi of hervous reaction before the it learns how to appropriate the feuits of its period of feverish ex-cliement. Proletarian revolutions. on the contrary, such as those of the nineteenth century, criticize themselves constantly; constantly interrupt themselves in their own ourse; come back upon what seem to have been accomplished, in order to start over anew; scorn with cruel theroughness the half measures. theroughness in mannesses of their first attempts; seem to throw down their adversary only in order to enable him to draw fresh strength from the earth, and again to rise up against them in more gigantic stature: constantly recoil in fear before the undefined monster magnitude of their own objects -until finally that situation is created that renders all retreat impossible, and the conditions themselves ory out:

Hie Rhodus, hie salta! Here is the rose, now dance! Marx.

The Socialist Labor Party candidate for Supreme Court Judge in Iowa, Kollmetz, polled 910 votes. The vote of the candidate at the head of the ticket, Kremer, for Governor, will not be known until after the count by the Legislature. His vote will not differ materially from Kollmetz', which indicates a growth of 100 per cent.

The States whose official vote is not yet known are, besides Iowa, New Jersey, New York and Virginia. The reports that are in from each of these States shows larger votes. All appearances now indicate that the Socialist voting strength in 1897 is greater than we first imagined; it will be 52,000, if not more.

Last year the total vote was 36,564.

RENDERING HOMAGE TO THE S.L.P.

The organization, like the man, whose conduct is correct will find that even where seeming difficulties beset its or his path, what happens is bound in the end to redound to its and his favor. Every incident that happens is tributary to such organization's or man's success. Thus the law of cause and effect is inevitably on the side of Right, and fur nishes recruits against Wrong. Of this fact a recent circumstance, not intended to favor the Socialist Labor party organization, furnishes a striking illusthis is done an interesting fact is discovered.

About two years ago a party member in Lynn conceived an estimate of his own merits that neither his Section nor the party at large shared; he strove to override the party's constitution; was called down, and finally expelled by an overwhelming majority of the party vote. On that occasion, a hysterical lady friend of his, at that time also a member of the party, swang to his side, declaring that he was "greater than the party." and she is among those now 'democratically" raising the cry of 'bossism" against the S. L. P.

Nor is she alone. In unison with her we find the cry of "bossism" raised against the S. L. P. by quite a coterie of women of both sexes who are on their knees before "The Chief," "The Leader," "The Jupiter" of the "Social Democracy" of Chicago- a gentleman, who; were he to disappear from the scene, would carry along with him all that there is of the "Social Democracy" who frames its "laws," enforces them. etc., without being accountable to anyone for what he does, says, etc.

It is not our purpose here to weigh the merits or demirits of these two gentlemen. Let them be all that they and their worshipers think they are. What we and the history of the movement is here interested in is the psychology of those who charge the S. L. P. with bossism and who themselves are the praise-singers of the individuals above referred to. What does their conduct betray? A love for democracy? A hatred of bossism? No. Their conduct betrays the fetich worshippers who justly rebel against an organization so sturdily democratic as the S. L. P. that it will not tolerate any idols within its camp, and is only too glad to be rid of the idolaters who would impose their Mumbo Jumbos upon a movement that needs men, and not sheep, to fulfil its historic mission.

The revolutionary organization of the proletariat is larger, greater, nobler, wiser than any man, be he who he may; and it, and no man or minority set, must control its own destiny. The cry of "bossism" raised against it is borne by the S. L. P. as a badge of honor. . It is proof that the democracy it preaches is not the cant of demagogues to catch flies with: is democracy indeed, whose cardinal principle is that power comes from below. As the S. L. P. owes a debt of gratitude to the Goulds, who hasten the development of capital and thereby furnish object lessons to Socialist economics; as it owes a debt of gratitude to the political parties of the silver and gold mine barons, who by their acts of unconscionable cruelty to the proletariat furnish object lessons to the Socialist theory of the class struggle; so does the S. L. P. owe a debt of gratitude to the idolatrous worshipers of one man power. who by their denunciations of the S. L. P. render homage to its genuine democracy, by contrast promote the wise organic principles on which the S. L. P. is built, and on which all truly revolutionary proletarian movement must-be built if it is to be successful.

POLITICAL and ECONOMIC.

The San Francisco, Cal., "New Charter" puts its finger on a capitalist sore, and keeps it there long enough to make the thing evident. It says: "One of the worst dens in this city for every specie of vice is located on Market street, within a block of the Emporium. In reference thereto the magazine 'Society'' says:

"Perhaps pressure could be brought to bear upon Mr. John W. Mackay, the owner of the property, if he could be induced to realize the fact that during the long period of years that this place has been open, no one has had nerve enough

P, vote was made despite all that the Social Democracy" could do to kill it; despite all the falsehoods that its 'Socialists'' set afloat against the party; despite all the confusion they sought to create in our ranks.

The Cleveland, O., "Citizen" sums up correctly the status of Populism thus: "The People's party is almost wiped

"The People's party is almost wiped out. A drop from 52,000 votes in 1895 to 6,200 this year shows the ravages of fusion. In Kentucky the vote dropped from 9,800 to 6,000. In lowa the vote was 4,000 instead of 30,000. In Virginia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New York Maryland, Massachusetts, New Yow and New Jersey the party has gone out of business entirely, and hereafter there will be no fusion or anything else in those States. The fusionists in Kansas, Nebraska and Colorado have just about hung on by the skin of their teeth Secretary Jo Parker, of the middle-of-the-road faction, sums up the situation: All in all, this is a bad year for Populists.' Ring down the curtain."

All we have to add to this is that 'Populism" from the start spelled 'Fusion" or "Confusion."-and that such is the spelling of whatever movement does not class-consciously spell "Capitalism" or "Socialism." The tug of war is between these.

How little truth there is in the notion that Americanism, as represented by our capitalist press is the most virile sign of individualism and democracy is made manifest by this comment on the Austrian parliamentary disturbances by the Detroit, Mich., "News":

"The Austrian Reichsrath appears to very weak in its Thomas Brackett Reed department."

In other words, this mouthpiece of ca; italist thought imagines that a whole pc ular disturbance can be quelled by one man; it does not realize that what Read did here he could not have done 50 years ago, and will be utterly unable to repeat within the next ten years. Government is enforced with the consent of the governed.

PROFIT and GROUNDRENT.

Whence does the capitalist class rive its income? The gains of MER-CHANTS' and USURERS' CAPITAL chants and userails capital consisted originally of the portions which they withheld from the property of those who needed them, either to satisfy a craving for juxuries, or for aid in distress. It is otherwise with IN-DUSTRIAL CAPITAL. The capitalist class performs no man-

The capitalist class periodics is done by the wage-worker. But the wage-worker does not produce for himself, he cannot. All the things, which together are to-day indispensable for production —land and capital—, are the private property of a comparatively small num-ber of people. The proletarian, the person who has none of these, must either starve or sell the only thing left to him, his labor power, to the person who will buy it. That person is the capitalist. When the capitalist buys the labor power of a proletarian, and therelabor power of a proletarian, and there-by turns the latter into a wage-worker. he does so only because the wagé-worker will produce more than he is paid for. If he produced only as much as he is paid for-and worse yet if he produced less-the capitalist would have no use for him, would not buy his labor power, would not have him for a wageworker. The proletarian, the wage-worker -employed by the capitalist, is worker, employed by the capitalist, is the wealth producer. Out of the heap of wealth brought into life by the wageworker himself, the capitalist takes a part, not more than one-quarter, if as much, and RETURNS that to the wageworker in payment for his labor power as his WAGES. The rest of the wealth wealth produced by the wage-worker, the re-maining three-quarters, if not more, is the SURPLUS, that is to say, the quantity of wealth produced by the worker over and above what was necessary to enable him to restore the forces he pended in production. That SURPLUS the capitalist keeps to himself; he calls it PROFITS; it constitutes his INCOME. Industrial capital, accordingly, hatches its profits by exploiting the propertiless wage-workers.

It so happens, however, that, in It is in here the capitalist system of pro-duction develops, the industrial form of capital overshadows all others, and forces them into his service; and, fur-thermore, that this evolution cannot go on without the capitalists' returning to the wage-workers, in some manner or another-by the employment of an increased number of personal service men such as lackeys, watchers, etc.; by in-stitutions styled "benevolent"; and so forth-a part of the surplus which they withhold from him. As a result of all these causes, the surplus produced the proletarians becomes ever more the only source from which the WHOLE CAPITALIST CLASS draws its income.

As the small industrialist and small farmer are disappearing, and their in fluence upon modern society is felt ever less, so also, are disappearing the old forms of merchants' and usurers' capital. both of which made their gains by exploiting the non-capitalist classes. Already there are nations without artisans and small farmers. England is an in-stance in point. But no one can conceive of a single modern State without large production. Whoever desires to inderstand the modern forms of capital must, to-day, proceed from the in dustrial form that capital has assumed. The real and most prominent of the sources from which all capitalist gains flow is to be found in the surplus which capitalist industry hatches out.

The proletariat produces the surplus which industrial capital appropriates; this surplus is on a 'steady increase through the increased burden of toil thrown upon the workers, through the introduction of labor-saving machines through the cheapening of labor power, etc., etc. Side by side with the develop-ment of the capitalist system of production grows the number of the exploited proletarians, and, as an inevitable consequence of this, the quantity of surplus that flows into the hands of the capitalist class becomes ever larger and larger.

Unfortunately, however, "life's unalloyed enjoyment is not the lot mortal man." However hateful t alloyed enjoyment is not the lot of mortal man." However hateful the operation may be to him, the capitalist is compelled to "divide." The LAND-LORD and the STATE or GOVERN-MENT both come in for their shares; and the capitalist class is compelled to divide with them the surplus that if divide with them the surplus that it scoops in.

When one speaks of the classes which are steadily becoming the sole propertyholders and exploiters, the monopolists of the instruments of production, dis-tinction must be made between CAP-ITALISTS and LANDLORDS; and, furthermore, the fact must not be over-looked that, to speak of the small holder of land as a landlord, is as great a mis use of terms as to speak of the small holder of capital as a capitalist. The capitalist system of production is rapidly extinguishing both of these small holders, and congesting into the hands of a few whatever valuable property still lingers in the hands of the small man The land is a peculiar means of pro-duction; it is the most necessary of all; without it no human activity is possible: even the sailor and the aeronaut need a place of departure and for landing: furthermore, it is a means of production that cannot be increased at pleasure. For all this, it must be noted that as yet it has but rarely happened that every inch of ground in any State was actually occupied or used productively by its habitants; even in China, with all the thickness and primitiveness of her population, there are still wide stretches of unreclaimed land. The private ownership of an article, so all-essential to life and production as land, confers theoretically a preponder-ating, irresistible power upon him who is vested therewith. To this appearance of things is due the notion that has seized upon some uncritical minds that the only cause of all PRESENT misery is private property in land; that the landlord alone sucks up all the in-creased productivity of both labor and capital; and that his removal, or the clipping of his wings, would restore to the people—both capitalists and work-men—all, or the bulk of, the wealth that directly or indirectly flows from them. This view of things indicates a total blindness to the significance of the cap-italist system of production, and the social evolution that underlies it. The relation of the capitalist to the landlord is not that of the wage-worker to the capitalist; on the other hand, the capitalist need not "stand and deliver" the only cause of all PRESENT misery to the landlord. The days are gone by when "white parasols and clephants mad with pride were the flowers of a grant of land." Such a state of things prevailed under former systems of duction, and in such countries as India; but even there they are steadily losing their pristine characteristics. Despite all that landlordism could and did do. the development of the capitalist system of production has conjured up a rival to the landlord of olden days and former social systems the capitalist; the power he wields makes him at least the equal of the landlord; the two can deal as peers; and in proportion to the the fulier development of capital, the scepter, formerly wielded by the land-lord class, came to be held by both landlord and capitalist, with a steady ten dency to being ultimately wielded by the latter alone. The power of the landlord is greater or less according to the smallness of the number of landlords, and the greater of lesser facilities which the laws afford for the sale of the land. In England both these circumstances contribute to strengthen the power of the land monopolist.

Here in the United States the attributes of capitalist and landlord are usually blended in the same person. The manufacturer usually owns the land on which his factory is built; the mining company usually owns its own mines; and in the domain of agriculture itself. where the industrial system of pro-duction is now in full bloom, the land of the bonanza farm is owned by the same capitalist concern that cultivates it. For all this it must not be lost sight of that when the capitalist is himself a land-lord, and operates upon his own land, he has not therefore escaped sharing his surplus with the landlord class. In nine cases out of ten, or even a much larger proportion, he has become a land owner a round sum of money. The annual interest which he would otherwise derive from that purchase money represents the rent he is paying to the landlord, i. e., the portion of the surplus which he squeezes out of labor, and which he is compelled to share with the landlord class. The purchase money or the rent, as the case may be, paid by the capitalist for the land he needs, is the slice of his surplus which he is compelled to share DIRECTLY with the landlord. But IN-DIRECTLY also does the landlord class appropriate to itself considerable portions of the wealth that would otherwise accrue to the capitalist. It happens this wav

The profits of the capitalist are, as shown above, that portion of the wealth shown above that photo of the well well above and withheld by the capitalist, after he has deducted the sum which he returns to the wage, worker in the shape of wages, to enable the toiler to live, work and reproduce himself. It follows, that the larger the base which the wages to achieve the state wells to base which the variation of the state of the st share which the wage-worker needs to live, work and reproduce himself, the smaller must be the share, called profits, which the capitalist can seize; and vice versa, the smaller the share which the wage-worker needs to live, work and reproduce himself, the larger will be the share, called profits, which the capitalist can seize. Anything that will diminish the cost of living-cheaper goods, cheaper rent, etc.-lowers the quantity of wages absolutely necessary to the wage-worker, and as his wages will then tend downward, the share of the wealth produced by him, but seized by the capitalist as profits, is increased; and vice versa, anything that will raise the cost of living-dearce goods, higher rent, etc. —raises the quantity of wages abso-lutely necessary to the wage-worker, and as his wages would then have to rise, the share of the wealth produced by him, but seized by the capitalist as words is bound to decrease in pronorprofits, is bound to decrease in propor-tion. Now, then, the tendency of the ne-cessities of life is to decline in price owing to the increased quantities in which improved methods enable them to be produced. This tendency would to be produced. This tendency works tend to be produced. This tendency works are quired by the wage-worker, to reduce his wages, and, correspondingly, to increase the share of profils left in the hands of the capitalist. But the effect of cheaper commodities upon the downward tendency of wages and the upward tendency of profits is checked by the increasing price of one of the necessities of life—city land. It is the irony of fate that one of the effects of the capitalist system of production is to crowd people --proletarians--into cities, thereby to raise the rent that the wage-worker must pay, and by so much to reduce the share of withheid wages which the cap-litalist can seize as profits. This increased rent, paid by the wage-worker

UNCLESAN & BROTHER JONALTAN.

Brother Jonathan-Now that Con-gress is about to meet 1 hope it will pass a mighty rigid anti-immigration bill.

Uncle Sam-Enlighten me, if you will, upon your reasons for wishing that. B. J.M-1 have upany. U. S.-Let's start with the first.

B. J.—The first is so clear that you, as a Socialist, will grant it forthwith. It s a direct deduction from Socialist principles. U. S.-1 have heard so many funny things advanced in the name of Social-ism that I won't be surprised at your argument

B. J.- Does not Socialism maintain hat labor is merchandise under the that capitalist system?

U. S.-It does. B. J.-And that, in the markets, the price of merchandise is determined by the supply of and the demand for the merchandise?

U. S.-Correct again. B. J.-And that, therefore, the price. of Labor, that is, the wages of the ingman, depends upon the supply of the demand for labor? U.S.-Just so. B. J.-Now, then, does it not follow that the more labor there is on the market the lower must be the price of labor, or the wages of the workingman? U. S.-Correct again.

B. J.-1 told you so, you would be bound to admit that immigration must be stopped. U. S.-I certainly have not yet done

B. J.—But you will. Does not immi-gration increase the supply of labor?

U. S.-Say it does. B. J.-That's all that I reed. Whoever B. J.—That's all that i reed, whoever admits that the wages of the working-man must go down if the supply of labor increases, must grant that immigration, which does increase the supply of labor, must lower wages. You must consequently admit that we need anti-immigration laws. immigration laws.

U. S.-1 don't. B. J.-But-

U. S .-- Let me now have my innings. A hogshead seven feet high would be taller than you, eh?

B. J.-Guess so; I am only 5 feet 6 inches. U. S.--Suppose I put you into such U. S.--Suppose I put you into such vat and pour in water from above till I fill it all up. What would become of you

B. J.—I would drown. U. S.—What would you do before you drowned B. J.-I would try to keep the water from pouring in. U. S.—You would try to restrict the immigration of water from above?

B. J.—Just so. U. S.—Now, suppose the water is already 12 inches higher than your head what good would it do you to prevent more from coming in? Enough is in to drown you. Say that you succeed in keeping me from pouring in 6 mere inches of water, would that save you from becoming a chubby angel in heaven, playing on a golden harp?

B. J.--Well, no. U. S.--Have we now a larger supply of labor than we can stand? B. J.--Yes. There are at least 5,000,- 000 superfluous workers in the land. U. S.—And the result is? B. J.—That our wages are low; they

B. J.—That our wages are low; they are starvation wages. U. S.—Correct. Now, will you deny that it is as stupid to prevent immigra-tion now, as an aid to higher wages, as it is to prevent the immigration of more water into a tank in which the water is already a foot over your head? B. J.—But, damn it! What would you have me do? have me do?

-What would you do if you were in that tank?

In various parts of the country the whine is now heard about "bossism in the S. L. P.": from sotto basso to chorus treble the song is heard from a variety of throats. Let it be watched carefully and the complaint will be found to be a well merited homage. rendered to the sturdy democracy of the S. L. P.

. L. P. Even outsiders, unacquainted with the details of our party's mechanism, but furnished with thinking powers, know that bossism is an impossibility in the S. L. P. for the reason that the party lacks the indispensable tool for bossism. No patronage; no boss. The political boss holds himself through his. power to dispense livings. As the S. L. P. has no patronage to bestow, bossism in its ranks is out of the question. But, furthermore, those who know anything about the party are well aware that the system of its organization directly guards against such danger. As nothing of any importance can be done in the party without a referendum vote, such a thing as rule from above has no ground to stand on. Every intelligent man knows that. So far, the very fact that assault against the S. L. P. must proceed from lack of intelligence or lack of veracity is a source of strength to the S. L. P. Stupidity makes no progress, and the legs that lies walk on are proverbially worn out. The end of it all is increased prestige for the attacked. But there is more in this matter that redounds to the honor of the S. L. P.

to the landlor which it INDIRECTLY deprives the capitalist class. The quantity of wealth that the landlord can appropriate from the capitalist class, becomes larger in proportion as the general demand for land increases, in proportion as population grows, in proportion as the capitalist class needs land; i. e., in proportion as the capital ist system of production expands. In proportion with all this, rent rises, that is to say, the aggregate amount of wealth increases which the landlord class can slice off—cither directly or indirectly-from the surplus that would otherwise be grabbed by the capitalist class alone.

The Knoxville, Tenn., "Tribune" gives this description of one of our capitalist farms:

"The largest farm in the country, and probably in the world, is situated in the southwestern part of Louisiana. It ex-tends 100 miles east and west. It was purchased in 1883 by a syndicate of Northern capitalists, by whom it is still operated. At the time of its purchase its 1,500,000 acres was a vast pasture for cattle belonging to a few dealers in that country. Now it is divided into pasture stations or ranches, existing every six The fencing is said to have cost 0. The land is best adapted for miles $50,000. rice, sugar, corn and cotton. A tract, say half a mile wide, is taken, and an engine is placed on each side. The engine is placed on each side. The engines are portable and operate a cable attached to four plows. By this ar-rangement thirty acres are gone over in a day with the labor of only three men. There is not a single draught horse on the entire place, if we except those by the herders of cattle, of which there are 16,000 head on the place. The Southern Pacific Railroad runs through the farm. The company has three steamboate operating on the waters of the estate, of which 300 miles are navigable. It has also an icehouse, bank, shipyard and ice mills."

Where does the small farmer come in?

B. J.-Kick it to pieces. U. S.-And that is just what Social-C. S.—And inat is just what Social's ists tell you to do with the tank of the social system in which surplus labor is now drowning you. Just because labor is a merchandise day the Socialist wastes no time on questions like that of immigration. Let's conquer Congress, and thereby kick to pieces the capitalist tank.

INDUSTRIAL CRISES.

Great as is the uncertainty of a liveli-bood for all clatses under the existing social conditions, the uncertainty is further increased by the CRISES, which are periodically brought on with the certainty of doom, the moment produc-tion reaches a certain stage. The important effect of these crises upon the body economic during the last decades, together with the general con-fusion of thought that prevails upon the subject, requires special attention.

"OVERPRODUCTION.

The extensive modern crises, which convulse the world's markets, arise from OVERPRODUCTION, which in its turn arises from the PLANLESSNESS that inevitably accompanies the modern system of production.

system of production. Overproduction, in the sense of more being produced than is actually needed, may occur under any system. But such could, as a matter of course, cause no injury so long as the producers produce for the satisfaction of their own wants. If, for instance, in generations gone by a farmer's crop of corn happened to be larger than he needed, he stored up th surplus against poorer years, and when his barn was full he would feed his cattle with the residue, or, at worst, let

It is otherwise with the modern system of production. In the first place, in its well developed form, no one pro-duces for himself, but for someone else: every one must buy what he needs: moreover, the total production of noreover, the total production of so-ciety is not carried on in a planful way; on the contrary, it is left to each pro-ducer to estimate for himself the quan-tity of the demand there may be for the goods which he produces. In the second place, just as soon as the modern system of production has outgrown its first production has outgrown 'its stage, no one, except the producer of colnable metals, can buy before he has sold. These are the two roots out of which the CRISIS shoots up.

THE CRISIS.

For the illustration of this fact, le the simplest example possible serve. A a market place, let there come togethe a market place, let units control toger, with twenty dollars in gold; a wine mer-chant, with a cask of wine: a weaver, with a bundle of cotton cloth; and a miller with a lend of meal. To simplify the case, let the value of each of these markets are served to twenty dollars and let ds be equal to twenty dollars, and let goods be equal to twenty donars, and le it be assumed that each has correctly estimated the needs of the other: the wine merchant sells his wine to the gold digger, and, with the twenty dollars which he receives therefor, purchase which he receives indexed, pictures of the cloth in the hands of the weaver; and lastly, the weaver invests the pro-ceeds of his cloth in the purchase of the load of meal. Each will go home satis-

Next year these four meet again, each Next year these tour meet again, each calculating upon the same demand for his goods as before. Let it be assumed that the gold digger is as partial now as be was last year tor the wine nurchain's wine, but that the latter has either no peed of cloth, or requires the money to pay a debt, and prefers wearing a torn shirt fo purchasing new material. In that case the wine merchant keeps in his pocket the twenty dollars and 'r's home. In vain does the weaver wait for a customer; and for the same reason that he waits, the miller is also ex-pectant. The weaver's family may be hungry; he may crave for the meal in the miller's hands; but he has produced cotton cloth for which there is no dehungt man; and for the same reason that the doth became "superfluous," the meal also is rendered "superfluous," Neither the weaver nor the miller has any money; neither can purchase what he wants; what they have produced now appears as excessive production: and, furthermore, the same is the case with all other goods that have been produced for their use, and which they stand in need of: to carry the illustra-tion'a little further, the table produced by the joiner and needed by the miller the shoes produced by the shoemaker and needed by the joiner, etc., etc., all of these remain unexchanged, unused, they are "everproduced."

The leading features of an industrial The leading features of an industrial crisis are all present in this illustra-tion. Of course, in reality, the crisis does not manifest itself at such a primitive stage of production. At the first stages of the production of merchandise, of production for sale, every producer produces more or less for self-consumption: production for sale constitutes, in each family, but a part of its total industry. The weaver and the miller of the illustration given tboye are each possessed of a patch of

Finally, commerce, acting hand in hand with the development of the means of transportation, lends wings to mer-chandise; to-day these can be brought together in large quantities on any spot upon the slightest provocation. All these causes combined render more and All more uncertain the work of estimating the demand for and the supply of com-modities. The development of statistics does not remove this uncertainty. The whole economic life of society becomes ever more dependent upon mercantile speculation, and the latter becomes ever more risky

The merchant is a speculator from the the merculation was not invented at the exchange; it is a necessary function of the capitalist. By speculating, i. e., by estimating in advance the demand for a commodity; by buying his goods where he can get them cheap, i. e., where their sumply is everysive: and where their supply is excessive; and selling them where they are dear, i. e., where they are scarce, the merchant helps to bring some order into the chaos of the planless system of production, that is carried on by individually independent concerns. But he is liable to error in his calculations, and all the more, as he is not allowed much time to think. He is not the only merchant in the world; hundreds and thousands of competitors lie in wait to profit by every favorable opportunity: whoever espies this carries off the prize. such circumstances quickness is a ne cessity: if will not do to reflect long, to inquire much: the capitalist must venture; nothing venture, nothing have! Yet may he lose. So soon as there is a demand for a commodity in any market, it flows thither in large masses, until its quantity exceeds the digestive powers of the market. Then prices tumble; the nerchant must sell chenp, often at a loss, or seek another market with his goods. His losses in this operation may be large enough to ruin him. Whenever the modern system of pro-duction for sale is well developed and prevails, any given market is either excessively or insufficiently supplied. Capitalist economists pronounce this to be a most wise and admirable provision. Common sense holds differently However that may be, the thing is in-evitable from the moment production for sale reaches a certain degree of per-fection and is kept in force. This "wise" provision may, however, lead to the result that, in response to some extra ordinary cause, the overstocking of a market becomes so excessive that the ses of the merchants may be extraordinarily heavy, and a large number them become unable to meet their lia-bilities, i. e., fail. Under such circum-stances, a first-class commercial crisis is on the tapis.

SMALL AND LARGE PRODUCTION.

So long as small production was the leading form of industry, the extent and intensity of commercial crises could not be but limited. Whatever the call, it was not then possible to increase rapidly the total amount of wealth at any one place. Under the rule of manufacture or small industry, production is not cap-able of any considerable extension: it cannot be extended by the employment of a larger number of workmen; under ordinary circumstances, it employs all the members of a community that are at all able to work; it could be extended at an able to work; it could be extended only by making heavier the burden of toil borne by the worker—lengthening his hours of work, depriving him of holidays, etc., etc.; but in the good old days, the independent mechanic and farmer, who were not yet crowded by the competition of large production, did not hanker after this sort of thing; and finally, even if they submitted to such imposition, it makes little difference to production, the productivity of labor vas trifling.

This changes with the rise of capitalist large production. It not only de-velops all the means that enable com-merce to swamp any market with goods to a degree never dreamt of before, not only expands the separate markets into a world's market that embraces into a the whole globe, it not only multiplies the number of the middlemen between the producer and the consumer, it furthermore enables production to respond to every call of the trade, and to extend and increase with leaps and bounds.

present, the very circumstance that the workmen are wholly subject to the capitalist-that he can, virtually at will, lengther, their hours of work, suspend their Sundays, cut into their night rest etc.-crables him to increase production at a more rapid pace than it was formerly possible. But furthermore, to day, one single hour overwork means, with the present productivity of labor, an increase of production immensely larger than in the days of manufacture. Nor is this all. To-day the capitalist is in a condition to extend his concern upon short notice. Thanks to credit capital has become a very elastic quan tity. A brisk trade increases confidence draws money out these confidence draws money out upon the street shortens the time requisite for the cir shortens the time requirements of the culation of money, and, accordingly, in-creases its effectiveness. But most im-portant of all CAPITAL HAS PER-MANENTLY AT ITS DISPOSAL A LARGE RESERVE ARMY OF WORK-MEN-THE UNEMPLOYED. The cap-relate is thus able at any time to exitalist is thus able at any time to ex-pand his establishment, to employ ad-ditional workmen, to increase his production rapidly, and to profit to the ut most by every favorable opportunity.

has increased prodigiously, and the originally increased demand in the market has been satisfied. Nevertheless, production does not stop. One-pro-ducer does not know what the other is about; although, at some lucid interval, doubts and misgivings may arise in the mind of some capitalist or another, these are soon smothered by the necessity he is under of profiting by the favorable opportunity that seems at hand, and not to be left behind in the competitive chase; he knows that "the devil takes the hindmost." In the meantime, the disposal of the increased quantity of goods becomes ever more difficult, and grows slowlier; the stores fill up; yet the hurly burly goes on. Then comes the moment when one of the mercantile establishments must pay for the goods which he received from the manufacturer months before; the goods are yet unsold; the creditor has goods but no money; he cannot meet his obligations, and fails. Next comes the turn of the manufacturer; he also has contracted debts that fall due; as his debtor can not pay him, he, too, is done Thus one bankruptcy follows for. another; a general collapse ensues; the recent blind confidence turns into an equally blind fear; the panic grows general; and the crash is on. At such times the whole industrial mechanism is shaken to its very center: every establishment that is not planted upon the firmest ground drops; misfortune overtakes not the fraudulent concerns alone, but also all those which in ordinary times managed to keep their heads above water: at such seasons, the expropriation of the small farmers, small producers, small dealers and small capitalists goes on rapidly. Nor is it the small fry alone that is swept over hoard; many a big fish goes along; there is hardly any one certain of not being dragged down in the general ruin. As a matter of course, those among the large capitalists who survive derive a rich booty. During a crisis two im-portant things take place: first, the expropriation of the "small fry; secondly, the concentration of produc-tion in fewer hands, and thereby the propriation' promotion of the accumulation of large fortunes.

As few, if any can tell whether they will survive the crisis, all the horrors of the modern system of production are then experienced in an intensified degree: the uncertainty of a livelihood, want, prostitution and crime reach at times alarming proportions such productive powers are becoming more and more irreconcilable with the system of production for sale, and that private ownership in the means of production is growing into a greater and greater urse for everybody-first for the class of the propertiless, and then for that of the property-holders themselves.

With the fuller development of the capitalist system, i. e., with the in-creased concentration of all wealth into fewer and fewer hands, brought on greatly by previous crises, the crisis has ceased to be a "periodical occurrence" in the strict sense in which it was so be-fore. At one time, and that not long ago, one-quarter of the failures that have created public consternation; to-day, a much more swollen and ever swelling register of bankruptcies passes unperceived by the public, but not, therefore, the less felt by the innumerable victims; the hemorrhage is now THE CRISIS HAS BECOME PERMANENT, and with it all its hor-

It is probably owing to this circum stance, to wit, that the phenomenon of the crisis has ceased to be "periodical," that some uncritical, feather-brained political economists have declared the would do away with the crisis. This is faise.

THE TRUST.

The regulation of production by large syndicates or trusts presupposes above all things their control of all branches of industry and the organization of these upon an INTERNATIONAL BASIS in all countries over which the capitalist system, of production stretches itself. Until now, no successful international trust has yet appeared in any leading in-dustry, and it is difficult to conceive of any; so far, the Standard Oil Trust is the nearest approach to one. Inter-national trusts are difficult to organize, and more difficult to hold together. More than forty years ago Karl Marx pointed out that not only does competition promote monopoly, but monop-oly promotes competition. The larger the profits that accrue to a greater is the danger of an outstanding and powerful capitalist setting up competing concern to pluck some of profits himself; and, furthermore, the more business prospers, the greater is the temptation of every member of the trust concern to escape the restrictions imposed by the trust, and to withdraw from it. This, of course, has its limit the limit is reached when the capital needed to compete with the trust is larger than individual capitalists can bring up. When prices go down, the anxiety for trustification is great; when prices go up every producer strives to improve the opportunity to his utmost, and to throw upon the market as many goods as possible. The trust will in most cases fail to check overproduc-With regard to overproduction the principal mission of the trust is, not to check it but to shift its evil consequences from the shoulders of the cap italists upon those of the workmen and consumers; they are intended to aid the large capitalists in weathering the storm of the crisis; temporarily to restrict production; to discharge work-men, etc., without considerably affect-ing profits. Within the boundaries of one country, the difficulties that beset the formation and preservation of the trust are very considerably lessened; the trust can and does flourish there; it is different, however, with an INTER-NATIONAL TRUST. But let it be assumed that eventually the leading industries shall have been successfully organized into inter-national trusts, under such strict discipline that they will resist the dis-solving effect of good times. What were then the result? Competition among capitalists would be removed only on one side. The more completely comone side. The more completely com-petition disappears among the producers in one and the same branch of industry, all the greater becomes the antagonism between them and the producers of other commodities who depend upon the products of the trust. In the measure in which hostilities cease between the producers engaged in the same branch of industry, they become bitterer between the producers and the consumers. It so happens, how-ever, that every producer is also a consumer. The cotton mill owner, for instance, is a consumer-apart from his private and personal needs-of cotton, coal, machinery, oil, etc. In short, complete, international trustification would cause the capitalist class to be divided, no longer into separate individuals, but into hostile clans, who would wage war to the knife against one another.

THE INEVITABLE DEVELOPMENT.

To-day every single capitalist is eager to produce AS MUCH AS POSSIBLE, to throw upon the market all the goods he can, because, other things being equal, the more goods the more profit; only his estimate of the capacity of the market, and his own capacity to enlarge his cap ital limit the extent to which he will produce. On the other hand, when the system of trusts shall have become general, we shall not then find a better regulation of production and with that a discontinuance of the crisis, as some white-washers of our present social order would make us believe; what we shall find is the general eagerness of each separate trust to produce AS LITTLE AS POSSIBLE, because the smaller the supply the higher the price. The practice, formerly, and even to-day not infrequently, resorted to by mer chants, of destroying a portion of their goods, when the market is overstocked, with the view of fetching profitable prices for the rest, would then, in a manner, become general. It is evident, however, that society could not then continue to evict. If every trust strains continue to exist. If every trust strains under production, all others would strain to force those trusts, whose pro-ducts it needs, into a state of over-pro-duction. The ways of doing this would be many. The simplest would be for a trust to retrench its own consumption more than the other trust retrenches its production: another way would be to call upon science to supply the want of the article whose production is trustified and retrenched; still a third would be for the trust concerns, whose consump-tion is thus affected, to undertake, themselves, to produce what they need. Imagine the copper mines are trust-ified, that the production of copper is thereby reduced, and that prices are run What would be the result? Among up. What would be the the second seco cooper, some will close down and await better times; others will go in search of some other metal that may take the place of copper; and still others will themselves purchase copper mines or promote their sales, and thereby free themselves from dependence upon the "Copper-Ring." The end of all this is the bursting of the trust and its bank-ruptcy, i. e., another crisis. This is just what happened lately

The trust does not abolish the crisis. The only influence it would have in that direction would be to give the crisis another form—but not a better one. Bankruptcies would not be at an end; the only difference would be that they would extend their spheres; they would not fall upon the capitalists separately. upon whole sets of them at once and with them, of course, ruin the large them. Accordingly, the trust cannot do away with the crisis; what, on the contrade it can do is to bring on such sorts of crises as will be more devastating than any thing mankind has yet experienced.

Only when that point should have been reached that all trusts are joined into one, and that the whole machinery of production of all capitalist nations is concentrated into one single hand, i. e., only when private property in the means of production shall have virtually come to an end, only then could the trust have for its effect the abolition of the cricis. But contrariwise, from a certain stage on in the industrial development. the crisis, either in the "periodical" or present "permanent," or in some other and more aggravated form, is inevitable so long as private property continues in the means of production. It is simply impossible to remove only the shadows cast by private property in the instru-ments of production, and yet to preserve being is to play." No sooner does the babe observe and recognize than it begins to be mirthful. As it grows it develops this innate proclivity by all sorts of merry tricks and gambols. And its healthiness of mind and body depends as much puon its exercise of playfulness as much upon its exercise of playfulness culiar to children alone. All animals are more or less gifted with the same instinct. The newly-born gnat sports at once in the sunlight. The young whale plays with its mother. The fry of fishes hunt and frolic in shoals. The fledged birdlings chase each other through their leafy bowers, and things of lower life that ultimately become fixed in one spot, like sponges, pass through a period of play and free roving. The most cruelly carnivorous are as playful as those that live solely on herbs and fruits. Lions and tigers, bears and wolves are sportive as lambs in all whatever time is left after rest and foodprocuring, is devoted to play. For this is nature's chief method of developing the faculties and bodies of all young creatures, and of utilizing their pleasures for their interests.

As they grow older their sport is modified by the dominant instincts of their race or species. They begin to learn their life-work, but they do so playfully. Every animal is schooled in its own Kindergarten, and learns to work through games. Man is the only one who inflicts upon his progeny hard and dreary work, disassociated from enjoyment. Those who are not familiar with the ways of animals sometimes think these pursue their various courses from instinct alone-without having been taught. Nothing of the sort. It is true that some of those low in the scale of being may do so, but when we get to the birds and mammals we shall find that they have been carefully instructed by their parents, and by mock contests with each other. Birds teach their young to know their natural enemies, how to avoid danger, how to tiy, and how to procure their food. If we take domestic poultry, with which we are, perhaps, most familiar, we find the mother hen encouraging her little ones to romp over her, showing them how to peck up by placing small particles of food before them, and taking them into all sorts of out-of-the-way places in search of seeds, worms and insects. She instructs them in the art of cleansing themselves by dry earth baths, and of coursing themselves by roosting high securing themselves by roosting high up when their little limbs are strong enough. In the meanttime those of the same brood learn to use beak and spur by sparring with each other, at first playfully, and later with savage de-light. Those who have noticed a cat light. romping with her kittens know how the feline family make the games of their young instrum ntal in learning the right methods of catching their prey. With all, play is a means of instruction in the future duties of their lives.

When they become adults, they in-dulge in it as a recreation and as training for possible combats. Sheep play at butting, oxen at goring, horses at biting and kicking, and dogs at worrying. Turn out a few old worn-out cab horses to graze, and at the end of a week or so they will be tricky as colts, and flinging their rheumatic limbs in all directions. Man is a many-sided animal, and re quires recreation to a greater degree than others. His powers of reflection induce despondency as well as hope. He is oppressed with cares, and often borne down by much labor. His nerves are too frequently overstrung with work and worry. L Leisure, consequently, to health, and recreat recreation during it that he may restore his vigor When these are not possessed, he be-comes discontented, sullen, morose, vicious; and loses elasticity of mind and body. Should he have no rational means of enjoyment, he flies from hard labor to reckless debauch. The overstrained mind and body crave for wild excitement, and intemperance and immorality schools, it is true, have workshops, but the schools for the middle classes and poor should have them also. The power of observation is so rare because in the training of the young it is so seldom exercised. If schools included play and manual work as important parts of their curriculum, observation and intelligence would be quickened all around, and the pupils would soon find what they were most fit for. All this should apply equally to girls as well as boys. None should be excluded from want of fees. for the cost could be borne as that of the School Board is now. better methods. For, assuredly, educa-tion, to be complete, must recognize the wants of a progressive humanity. Clemens, an early Father of the Church, writing at the end of the second century, said: "For what other employ-ment is seemly for a wise and perfect man than to sport and be glad in the endurance of what is good, and in the administration of what is good, holding festival with God?" We thus see that recreation may be sanctioned to sacred purposes as well as to secular; that it may be an act of true worship as well as may be an act of true worship as well as of personal enjoyment. It is not for nothing that man is a laughing animal wholesome mirth inferior to emeanor. Work is good. Play nor is grave demeanor. Work is good. Play is good also. Both are necessary to complete the would-be perfect man. Let there be a time for work and a time for play, so that each be a help to each and a foil to the evils of the other. LADY COOK.

Bits for Future History.

To THE PEOPLE :--- It is not with any hope that anything here written will detrimentally affect the so-called Social Democracy, for my information is that if that organization at any time pos-sessed ability to harm the Socialist Labor Party, and thereby delay the in-auguration of economic emancipation, that day has now passed. But it may interest loyal Comrades to have pointed out to them with aubitoticity proof out to them with substantiating proof additional instances of the ignorance, indecision and utter lack of system, plan or originality that have so prominently characterized the movement.

To start with, the colonization plan that has been so widely heralded as "Debs' plan," is not Debs' plan at all, Theorem is the set of onization plan-to colonize the unem-ployed in some sparcely populated State and then take possession of the pullical machinery, that idea was enunci-ated by N. W. Lermond, of Thomastown, Me., fully a year before it was taken up by Debs. Lermond did the work of corresponding with Socialists in different States, and at that time, nearly two years ago, had made more progress than the "Colonization Commission" has made now. Not in one single feature has the Social Democracy changed, much less improved upon that scheme. It was a bail scheme, and they could make it fielther better nor worse; all they could do was to take it and make it a basis for an effort to sustain themselves when the organization that had before supported them was ruined by tactics equally as bad as those now advocated.

But upon one point Lermond had.not completed his scheme, and so for some months the proprietors of the Social Democracy were at a loss to know what they were to do. It was not stated by Lermond that the party which was to capture the political machinery in the colonized States was to be a national party. And so on the 20th of July 1297, the secretary of the Social Democracy did not know whether or not it was to be a national political party. On that date he wrote in answer to a correspondent: "I beg to say that this is a matter that will be taken up by the organization later on and submitted to the embers.' Has the question been submitted yet? Have the members decided? Has the Social Democracy decided whether or no it is a political party? Shame upon Mr. Lermond for having left them in doubt! One of the warm advocates of the Social Democracy and the Brotherhood of the Co-operative Commonwealth is the "Coming Nation," a paper published by a colony association. It might be supposed that such a paper would favor in practice the theory it advocates. But it does not. The "Coming Nation" favors political action for colony memhavors political action for colony mean-bers in Nevada and Washington, but op-poses political action by colonists in Tennessee. To a visitor to their colony at Ruskin, Tenn., it was told that they could take no part in a Socialist campaign in their county for fear of gaining the ill-will of their neighbors! And these are the people who prate of their bravery in "practicing Socialism!" J. H. S.

In our small settlements of a generation and more ago, every one knew every body, and was well informed upon his wants and his purchasing capacity; it most cases, the industrial mechanism of such places remained substantially the same from year to year; the number producers, the productivity of labor, the quantity of products, the number of consumers, their wants, the money at their disposal—all of these changed but slowly, and each change was promptly observed and taken into consideration.

Other capitalists entheir establishments, start new ones, increase the consumption of raw and subsidiary materials; new hands are taken in; and, simultaneously with all these, rent, profits and wages go up. The demand increases for all sorts of goods; all sorts of industries begin to feel the industrial prosperity; and this finally becomes general. At such times it looks as if every undertaking must prosper; confidence becomes blind; credit grows boundless; whoever has a beau of the increasing profits and rent At such time share of the increasing profits and rent seeks to turn a portion thereof into capital. Some 14 years ago, when Seth Low was Mayor of Brooklyn, he held the resignation of every head of department appointed by him. At an rate that provision in our party con stitution is at least a check. Even an elected Socialist candidate though could refuse to abide by it, he would stand convicted at the bar of good faith if he did. The moral bond is often found as strong as any.

are the readiest at hand. This un-natural mode of life wrecks the individual and deteriorates his offspring, for is impossible that healthy children should be produced by those who lead an unwholesome existence. It is idle to preach godliness and morality to those who are thus overwrought. They want leisure, time for thought and enjoyment. And, above all, they want in-struction in the best modes of recrea-tion. Leisure, to those who are not used to it, and who do not know what to do with it, is a very doubtful privilege, and likely to be put to evil uses.

It is necessary, then, that our natural love of play should have fuller and wiser development in youth, and that schools should be as composite as the pupils. The word "school" originally meant a originally meant a state of ease, a place of leisure and re tirement from work, and not a workshop for forcing young brains to their utmost powers. Our youth have so much to learn in a brief period that they nuch to learn in a brief period that they have no time to think. Rote' and cramming take the place of reflection. Competitive examinations are destroy-ing individuality, and reducing all to the same desid leard. same dead level. No more unphilosophic mode was ever devised by educational quackery, and in time we may rival the Chinese, who, by long ages of com-petitive examinations, have become mentally and morally stunted and stereotyped to the same dull pattern.

The school should be a place for play, and for mental and manual work combined. Bodily exercises and games should be as carefully taught as gram-mar, and the fingers and brains trained together. Play, work and book-learn-ing might be taught in turn, and schools be made delightfui and useful. As it is, children attend them for years and learn comparatively nothing, because they are pedantic prisons where they are immured without interest or healthy excitement. If we except cricket and football, which do not suit everyone, can only be played at certain times, and are dangerous in themselves, there is absolutely nothing to interest the majority of children. SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 25.-The Section of Springfield has changed its meeting place; in future it will have its meeting place, in the train have that and own headquarters at corner State and Main streets, in Ford's block. We have there a fine hall and two side rooms, and we will establish a reading room. We have struggled hard to get it. Now Comrades it is for you to make it your home. CHAS. SCHULZE.

BOSTON, Nov. 29.—The official vote has just been announced. The vote in the State for Governor is as follows: Brophy (Socialist), 6.301; Bascom (Prohib.), 4.948; Everett (Gold bug), 13,879; Williams (Dem.), 79,552; Walcott (Rep.), 165,095.

(Rep.), 165,095. Buckland, Socialist candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, had 7,379; Barr (Secretary), 8,260; Brown (Treasurer), 8,595; Ballam (Auditor), 8,190; Harrison (Attorney General), 8,115. Brown, the candidate having the highest number of votes among the Socialists, had 2,294 more votes than the head of the ticket. Bascom, Prohibition candidate for Gov-ernor, fell short by 1,305 votes of reachernor, fell short by 1,305 voles of reach-ing the highest vote received by a cán-didate of that party, while Everett ran 2.323 behind the highest vote received by a candidate of the Gold hug party. Williams and Walcott ran ahead of all the candidates on their respective tickets. From the first time we entered the field the candidate at the head of the Socialist ticket has always polled less votes than the other candidates. In 1891 Robinson for Governor had 1,429 to 1891 Robinson for Governor had 1,429 to 2,525 for the candidate for Auditor. In 1892 the head of the ticket, Wine, for President, had 649, and Putney 871 for Governor to 2,009 for Auditor. In 1893 O'Nell, for Governor, had 2,008 to 3,000 for Treasurer. In 1894 the candidate for Governor had 3,104 to 4,220 for Auditor. In 1895 Ruther for Governor Auditor. In 1895 Ruther, for Governor, had 3,249 to 5,645 for Lieutenant-Gov-ernor. In 1896 the head of the ticket. Matchett, for President, had 2,114 to 4,548 for the highest candidate below the head of the ticket. The desertion of the head of the ticket in this State is an old and chronic disease that ought to be cured, if possible. It is, though, abating some, as the percentage of difference be-tween the vote for the head of the ticket, in 1897, and the vote for the candidate for some other office receiving the high-est vote is less than any year since we entered the field, and possibly as our vote increases from year to year, and the brothers weak at the knee-pans get strength, it will disappear altogether.

Delegate J. Langbart, of the Progress was chairman at last Sunday's meeting of the N Y. Central Labor Federation, D. A. No. 1, S. T. & L. A., and Delegate B. Korn, of the German Waiters' Union No. 1, was vice-chair-

Credentials were received from the N. Y. Cooks and Pastry Cooks' Associa-tion. Both were admitted after the Or-ganization Committee had reported favorably. A letter from Glendale, L. I., S. L. P., stated that a committee had investigated alleged charges against Comrade Schimmel and disproven same. The Section stated further that hereafter a statement should be investigated before allegations were publicly made. The letter was ordered filed and answered. The delegate who made the charges, though in October claimed he had read of the same in the New York "Volks Zeitung," and hence made the statement to the C. L. F.

A letter from the German Waiters' Union No. 1 was read. It stated reasons for not admitting a member on a trans-fer card from the Waiters' Alliance Liberty. A motion to instruct the said union to admit the said member according to the S. T. & L. A. constitution, was lost Waiters' Alliance Liberty reported having admitted a member of the German Waiters' Union No. 1 on a transfer card. The union was indignant because the G. M. W. No. 1 refused to co-operate with it in the organizing of a hall in this city. Bohemian Butehers' Union No. 1 reported having voted for B. Korn as member to the G. E. B. Int. Pianomakers' Union reported

With the founders o. this republic we hold that the true theory of politics is that the machinery of government must be owned and controlled by the whole people; but in the light of our industrial development we hold, further-more, that the true theory of economics is that the machinery of production must likewise being to the machine in comments. must likewise belong to the people in common.

To the obvious fact that our despotic system of economics is the direct opposite of our democratic system of politics, can plainly be traced the exist-ence of a privileged class, the corruption of government by that class, the alienation of public property, public franchises and public functions to that class, and the abject dependence of the mightiest of nations upon that class.

Again, through the perversion of democracy to the ends of plutocracy, labor is robbed of the wealth which it alone produces, is denied the means of self-employment, and, by compulsory idleness in wage slavery, is even deprived of the necessaries of life.

Human power and natural forces are thus wasted, that the plutocracy may rule.

Ignorance and misery, with all their concomitant evils, are perpetuated, that the people may be kept in bondage.

Science and invention are diverted from their humane purpose to the enslavement of women and children.

Against such a system the Socialist Labor Party once more enters its protest. Once more it reiterates its fundamental declaration that private property in the natural sources of production and in the instruments of labor is the obvious cause of all economic servitude and political dependence.

The time is fast coming, however, when, in the natural course of social evolution, this system, through the destructive action of its failures and crises on the one hand, and the constructive tendencies of its trusts and other capitalistic combinations on the other hand, shall have worked out its own downfall.

We, therefore, call upon the wage workers of the United States, and upon all other honest citizens, to organize under the banner of the Socialist Labor Party into a class-conscious body, aware of its rights and determined to conquer them by taking possession of the public powers; so that, held together by an indomitable spirit of solidarity under the most trying con-ditions of the present class struggle, we may put a summary end to that barbarous struggle by the abolition of classes, the restoration of the land and of all the means of production, transportation and distribution to the people as a collective body, and the substitution of the Co-operative Com-monwealth for the present state of planless production, industrial war and social disorder; a commonwealth in which every worker shall have the free exercise and full benefit of his faculties, multiplied by all the modern factors of civilization.

RESOLUTIONS.

With a view to immediate improvement in the condition of labor we present the following demands: 1. Reduction in the hours of labor in proportion to the progress of production.

2. The United States to obtain possession of the mines, railroads, canals, telegraphs, telephones and all other means of public transportation and communication; the employes to operate the same co-operatively under con-trol of the Federal government and to elect their own superior officers, but no employe shall be discharged for political reasons.

3. The municipalities to obtain possession of the local railroads, fer-ries, water works, gas works, electric plants and all industries requiring municipal franchises; the employes to operate the same co-operatively under control of the municipal administration and to elect their own superior officers, but no employe shall be discharged for political reasons.

4. The public lands to be declared inalienable, 'Revocation of all land grants corporations or individuals, the conditions of which have not been complied with.

5. The United States to have the exclusive right to issue money.

 Congressional legislation providing for the scientific management of rests and waterways, and prohibiting the waste of the natural resources of the country.

7. Inventions to be free to all; the inventors to be remunerated by the nation

8. Progressive income tax and tax on inheritances; the smaller incomes to be exempt.

9. School education of all children under fourteen years of age to be compulsory, gratuitous and accessible to all by public assistance in meals, clothing, books, etc., where necessary.
