A VICTORY

The Fortunes and Troubles of a Forty Year-old Backwoods

The American and English newspapers of this city are in a state of commotion over the recent defeat of the proposed international labor conference in Paris. The American papers are elaborately impugning the motives of the English labor leaders, and the English papers in turn are denouncing the American labor leaders.

The labor conference was to have been held in Paris, under the auspices of the International Labor Legislation Committee, and was to have been attended by representatives of thirty labor federations from twenty nations. The object of the conference was to discuss the question of labor conventions and treaties.

The American labor leaders, who had been in Paris for several days, were preparing for the conference, when they received a cable from their colleagues in the English labor movement, informing them that the conference was to be postponed for a year.

The English labor leaders had met with the French minister of labor, M. Dubois, and had been informed that the conference would be held in February, 1909.

The American labor leaders were greatly disappointed by this News. They had planned to go to Paris, and had already made all necessary arrangements. They were also angered by the action of the English labor leaders, who they believed had acted too hastily.

The American labor leaders are now planning to hold a conference of their own, to be held in New York, in order to discuss the question of labor conventions and treaties.

This conference will be attended by representatives of the American labor federations.

The English labor leaders are not likely to attend this conference, as they have already made arrangements to attend the conference to be held in Paris in February, 1909.

The American labor leaders are determined to hold their conference, and will not be deterred by the action of the English labor leaders.
