THE "FREE LABORER."

The recent elections have given the "free laborer" new opportunities for power and influence. The labor movement is growing stronger every day, and the time is not far distant when the "free laborer" will be able to assert himself in a way that will be felt by all men.

AN INSTANCE IN POINT.

Who Are the "Tramps," Workers, the New York Times Staff.

The following article from the "Tramps, Workers" of the New York Times staff is a remarkable example of the power of the free labor movement. It is a typical instance of the way in which the "free laborer" can assert himself and influence the course of events.

STARVATION WAGES.

The Wages of the Capitalist, Under Capitalism and Socialism.

In the time of the capitalist it is the owner of the factories and the machines, and therefore of everything that is necessary for production, who is the master. The worker, who makes his living by working for the capitalist, is a slave with no rights or freedom. He is paid a wage in return for his labor, but the wage is not enough to live on, and he is forced to work long hours in order to earn enough to support himself and his family.

Under socialism, the workers would own the factories and the machines, and they would have the power to decide how much they want to work and what they want to produce. The socialist worker is not a slave, but a free and equal member of society, who has the right to control his own life and work.

ADORATION OF GOLD.

A Passage From the Capitalist's Prayer Book.

Gold, wonderful merchandise, who would not adore thee? Who would not give their all to own thee? Who would not worship thee? Who would not sacrifice their lives for thee? Who would not die for thee? Who would not give all they have to thee? Who would not跪下 to thee? Who would not kiss thee? Who would not kiss thy feet?

Thus, the capitalist, most idolatrous of all mortals, adores thee, O golden charm. Thus, the capitalist, most idolatrous of all mortals, adores thee, O golden charm. Thus, the capitalist, most idolatrous of all mortals, adores thee, O golden charm.
