TELL-TALE MANIFESTATIONS

HOLYOKE, Mass., March 20.—Several things have recently happened in Holyoke, Mass., which are of interest to the working classes and which are worth our attention.

The first of these is the case of Franklin Mower, who, after being indicted for murder, was brought before the jury on Monday.

According to the evidence, Mower was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

The second case is the trial of the Board of Education.

The third case is the trial of the State Railroad Company.

POLITICAL AND ECONOMIC.

Under the heading "What Words Are These?" the Star gives the definitions of several political terms that are likely to be found in the future of the country. Among the terms that will be found here is the definition of "socialism.

It is only by reducing the working class to a condition of absolute dependence and inactivity that we can hope to achieve the social order we desire. The socialist laborer must be trained to obey, to work, and to accept his fate, without any further thought or action on his own part. Only then can the socialist system be truly established.

On the subject of class-consciousness, the Star states that the worker is the only class which can be class-conscious. "A class-conscious union," it says, "can only be the result of the class-consciousness of its members."

The Star suggests that the labor unions should be organized on a national scale, and that they should not be limited to local or state boundaries. The unions should be able to coordinate their activities and policies on a national level.

With the rise of the international socialist movement, the Star believes that the only way to achieve social justice is through the creation of a socialist state. This state would be characterized by a system of socialized industries, with the government owning and operating the means of production.

The Star concludes by stating that socialism is the only hope for the future of humanity. "Socialism will make the world safe for democracy," it says, "and it will bring about a utopian society where all men are equal and free."

The International Socialist Congress of 1909.

The following is an address delivered by the members of the Socialist League of the United States of America, as the result of their organization of all of its committees, for the purpose of uniting with the General Congress of the International Socialist Congress of 1909, appearing in the following:

"Comrade—As the International Congress of Socialists, we have every confidence that the General Congress of 1909 will take place in Paris in 1909. We deeply appreciate the necessity of the proposed organization of the International Socialist Congress, and to all intents and purposes, it must be accepted as a fact that the Congress will be held in Paris in 1909. We believe that the International Socialist Congress will be held at some definite place, in order to secure the best possible results. We shall, therefore, invite the International Congress to meet in Paris in 1909.

"Comrades—As the International Congress of Socialists, we have every confidence in the success of the proposed organization of the International Socialist Congress, and to all intents and purposes, it must be accepted as a fact that the Congress will be held in Paris in 1909. We believe that the International Socialist Congress will be held at some definite place, in order to secure the best possible results. We shall, therefore, invite the International Congress to meet in Paris in 1909.
