ways, whether he is a factor in social progress or not. We may be said to be under a social contract, and should be bound to cooperate with each other. Where there is a lack of physical labor there would be a surplus of capital, and vice versa. For instance, if one man is physically able to make more goods than another, it would be better for him to do so. But if he cannot, it would be better for him to do something else.
Otherwise, individual use and cooperation would be at a premium. In the course of eventualities, however, situations will change, and new conditions will arise.

Valuable Suggestions.

To the People.

We have had a number of people, including some of the most prominent persons in the community, express their approval of the scheme of labor reform which we are proposing. They say that it will be a great relief to the working classes, and that it will be of great economic benefit to the country. They say that it will do away with unemployment, and that it will make work for all.

We are gratified to hear these expressions of approval, and we are convinced that the scheme will be a success.

As to Comrade King's "Municipal Joyners".

antry. In the future, the working classes will be the managers, and the managers will be the workers. The workers will be the owners, and the owners will be the workers. The workers will be master, and the managers will be servants.

scheme is gaining in popularity.

people are beginning to realize
