Utter and Brazen Corruption.

The Comets and Tendency of the Labor Fakir.—How He Is Revised and Brought Up To Date.

By S. S. Douver, Novus.

The Fourth Annual Convention of the National Labor Alliance was held at the Pioneer Art Galleries of Boston, the 25th of October, 1899. The convention was composed of delegates from the various working people's organizations of the United States, and was convened for the purpose of electing a national body to represent the interests of the working men of America. The convention was opened by a presentation to the delegates of a resolution, which was unanimously adopted by the convention, the resolution declaring that the convention was "composed of delegates from the various working people's organizations of the United States, and was convened for the purpose of electing a national body to represent the interests of the working men of America." The resolution was adopted by a vote of 112 to 0, and was signed by all the delegates present.

The convention then organized and elected the following officers of the convention to conduct the business of the convention: President, S. S. Douver; First Vice-President, J. H. C. Pomeroy; Second Vice-President, J. H. C. Pomeroy; Third Vice-President, J. H. C. Pomeroy; Secretary, J. H. C. Pomeroy; Treasurer, J. H. C. Pomeroy.

CELLULOID PATHOLOGY.

In Rome the discolored population of the city is suffering from the use of the whitening and the medicating powders which are sold in the market. These powders are made from vegetable substances, which are said to have a specific effect on the skin. The disease, which is known as celluloid pathology, is characterized by a yellowish-brown discoloration of the skin, and it is believed to be caused by the use of these powders. The affected people are treated with medicinal herbs, and the disease is said to be curable if the powder is stopped. However, the disease is known to be chronic and difficult to treat.
