R. R. Workers Lose National Agreements

U.S. Board Denies Retention of National Working Agreements and Substitutes 6 Principles for Basis of Conferences of Men and Individual Branches.

Following a somewhat similar line of action in that of the joint committee of the National Labor Board, the U.S. Board of Labor Relations has now decided that the national agreements between the workers and the owners of the railroads are obsolete. The decision is the result of the expiration of the agreements in June 1911. Whether the plans of the Board will result in the abandonment of the agreements as such or in the establishment of new agreements is not yet decided. The Board will now act in the capacity of arbitrator to determine what labor relationships should be established.

WORKERS COUNCIL DEMANDS UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 7, 1911.

To the Editors, Nation and Working Man:

We, the representatives of the members of the Working Men's Council of Philadelphia, desire to make known the existence of a condition which, if not remedied, will result in the wholesale破产 of the working class of the city.

In view of the recent happenings in the city, we are confident that it is not too much to state that the working class is being mercilessly exploited. The wages of the workers are so low that they are unable to support themselves and their families. The distress is so great that many workers are forced to seek employment in other cities, and this only adds to the suffering of the working class.

We, therefore, demand the following measures to be taken immediately:

1. The establishment of a minimum wage for all workers.
2. The enforcement of a maximum work week.
3. The provision of unemployment relief.
4. The abolition of child labor.
5. The implementation of a progressive income tax.
6. The provision of affordable housing for all workers.

We hope that the government will take immediate action to alleviate the suffering of the working class and prevent the bankruptcy of the working class in Philadelphia.

Sincerely yours,

The Working Men's Council of Philadelphia

Organizing the Left Wing of Labor

By C. P. JACKSON

The Labor movement is divided into two parts. The first is the industrial wing, which represents the interests of the workers in the factories and workshops. The second is the political wing, which represents the interests of the workers in the political arena.

The industrial wing of labor is represented by the trade unions, which are organized around a specific industry or occupation. The trade unions negotiate contracts with employers to ensure better working conditions and higher wages for their members.

The political wing of labor is represented by political parties, which seek to influence the political process through elections and legislation. The political parties advocate for policies that benefit the working class, such as workers' compensation, minimum wages, and unemployment benefits.

Both wings of labor are necessary for the advancement of the working class. The industrial wing ensures that workers have the means to support themselves, while the political wing ensures that workers have a voice in the political process.

The two wings of labor must work together to achieve their common goals. The trade unions must support the political parties that advocate for workers' interests, and the political parties must support the trade unions in their bargaining efforts.

PASSAGE TO RUSSIA STOPPED

New York, April 14.—An armistice has resulted in the arrest of several dozen Russian workers who sailed from the port of Saint Petersburg on a luxury liner.

The workers, who were on their way to Russia to help with the civil war, were stopped by the British government and ordered to return to the United States.

The workers, who had been working to establish a socialist state in Russia, were arrest ed because they were suspected of being spies for the German government.

The workers, who had sailed on the same ship as the British government had arrested for espionage, were threatened with deportation to Saint Petersburg.

The workers, who had been working to establish a socialist state in Russia, were arrested by the British government and ordered to return to the United States.

WHAT CAN BE DONE.

The struggle has been lost, but the fight goes on. The workers must continue to resist the capitalist system and fight for a socialist society.

The workers, who had been working to establish a socialist state in Russia, were arrested by the British government and ordered to return to the United States.

Let us fight back against the capitalist system and create a socialist society where the workers are in control.
THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE 22ND CONGRESS OF THE 3RD, COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL: Moscow 1920

FROM THE "SECOND CONFERENCE OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL PUBLISHED BY THE HEBREW DIVISION OF STATE IN THE USA"

In July 1920, Comrade Lenin wrote a letter to Comrade Zinoviev in which he expressed deep concern about the state of the Russian Revolution. He felt that the revolutionary movement was in danger of being crushed by a counter-revolutionary offensive led by the Mensheviks and Social Revolutionaries. Lenin urged Zinoviev to take action to defend the gains of the October Revolution and to rally the工人阶级(working class) to resist the counter-revolution.

Lenin emphasized the importance of maintaining a strong revolutionary core within the party to prevent its degeneration into a middle-class organization. He warned that the party must remain vigilant against internal threats and external challenges, and that its leadership must be prepared to respond to any crisis with decisive action.

The letter concluded with a call to arms, urging all party members to remain united and to fight with all their strength to preserve the gains of the Revolution. Lenin's words were a clarion call to the party, inspiring its members to continue the fight for social justice and equality.
CAPITALIST OWNED COURTS.

It is a commonly accepted tenet that the courts of the United States are not owned, controlled, dominated and manipulated by the interests of the few. The "poor man, the worker not yet got justice in the courts," is a众所周知的上溯到1937年的插图，the working man who pays in one way or another for court costs, is the only one who can go to court. Instead of being the bulwark of the liberty of the laboring man and the nation, according to a common popular delusion, are now owned, controlled, dominated and manipulated by the classes rich and by the most commonly practiced methods of disavowal of court actions and decisions. Amending the old saying that "the rich man's" the law, we are inclined to believe that the decisions that the courts are made in conformity with the class interests that own them.

While this criticism is in order, we occasionally are asked about these examples of truth that they have been worthy of being kept. These are not new to the point. The first is the case of Alexander Horvath, formerly of a small family of court in the city of Kansas. He was first arrested and placed under bond of $10,000, not long after the Kansas Industry's court was established and had docked millions stolen illicitly. A man's arrest-strike to the profit of the International Industrial Court, Kansas, which has not yet been completed, therefrom.

The most important thing that a man can have in his pocket is the court action that he has won. The most important thing that a man can have in his hand is the court action that he has gained. The most important thing that a man can have in his bank is the court action that he has won. The most important thing that a man can have in his home is the court action that he has gained. The most important thing that a man can have in his brain is the court action that he has won. The most important thing that a man can have in his head is the court action that he has gained. The most important thing that a man can have in his soul is the court action that he has won. The most important thing that a man can have in his heart is the court action that he has gained.

The most striking thing about the International Industrial Court is that it is a court of a thousand employees and clients.
