LABOR DAY 1921

An Open Letter to President Harding

My Dear Pres. Harding: I am too busy to write a letter, as I am in the New York Times. It is on the 19th of Aug. 1921 and is entitled "A Fight for Labor Relief." I am going to send you a copy of the speech I made in the House of Representatives..."
The International Situation and Our Problems

A THESIS by
L. TROTSKY and E. VARGA

ADOPTED BY THE 3RD CONGRESS OF THE COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL, MOSCOW, JUNE, 1921.

The United States, Japan, Colonial Countries and Soviet Russia.

The development of the world during the war passed an opposing direction, in a certain sense, to that of Europe. The part played by the United States in the war was chiefly that of a submarine. The direct economic effect of the war was a small, direct effect upon that country, and the damage caused to its tobacco, cattle, and other staple industries, was, on a very small scale, far smaller than that caused to England, not to speak of other Franco or German. At the same time, the United States had kept its credit and the purchasing power of its currency intact. The principal cause of this was the fact that the United States had not been involved in the war; it was able to maintain an active export trade, while at the same time it supplied military supplies and raw materials to the Allies. All these conditions were due to the fact that the United States was not a member of the Central Powers, and that its economic structure was fundamentally different from that of Europe.

Social Constructions Intensified.

The unprecedented destruction of industrial resources brought about by the war has caused a marked change in the social construction of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has caused a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States. The war has brought about a marked change in the social structure of the United States.
Moderating Babies.

Among the many errors of Russia we are told of instances of the trade of children by desperate parents. Deaths are sure to come to many of these. The sight of such a thing is horrifying enough. One can hardly imagine the desperate straits to which normal parents must be driven before they are capable of offering up their offspring as a sacrifice.

Yet mothers murder their babies here—because of hunger. There is no other explanation. In Russia there is no work, no bread, no food, but mothers are driven desperate from hunger and in their desperation they sell their children. A child is their only means of livelihood and of existence for themselves. A child is their everything.

The whole nation is suffering. The people are starving. At St. Petersburg every day we see all sorts of human beings—old, young, and children, all hungry. At the elevators the women are standing in line, hoping for some rice or flour, begging for food. They are hungry and desperate. Mothers are forced to give up their children because of hunger.

The situation is critical. The government is doing all it can, but the problem is too great. The situation is desperate. The government needs the help of the people. They have to work together to solve this problem. They have to help each other. They have to support each other. They have to be united.

COMMUNIST LABOR PRESS DIARY

Oakland, Calif.—For the tenth time this month the labor movement in Oakland has been a active. The Communist Labor Party has called a strike against the Oakland Tribune, demanding the recognition of the Communist Labor Party as a legal organization.

The strike began on October 11th and continued until November 3rd. The paper was closed down for ten days, during which time it was not published. During this time the workers were able to organize and strengthen their ranks. The strike was successful in that the workers were able to force the publication of the paper and the recognition of the Communist Labor Party as a legal organization.

The workers were able to force the publication of the paper because they were able to organize and strengthen their ranks. The strike was successful in that the workers were able to force the publication of the paper and the recognition of the Communist Labor Party as a legal organization.
