SOCIALIST POINTERS

When in doubt what to do, for a vacation or for anything else, always do the simple thing; it will not only be the best thing, but it will in the end prove the most saving. It is a very good way to save money by not doing anything. When you want to have a vacation, do nothing; and when you want to have a good time, do nothing. It is the best way to save money. It is the best way to save time. It is the best way to save everything.

The vacation period is the time when money is saved. It is the time when people are not doing anything, and they are not spending money. It is the time when they are resting, and they are not working. It is the time when they are enjoying themselves, and they are not worrying about anything. It is the time when they are having a good time, and they are not thinking about anything. It is the time when they are happy, and they are not sad. It is the time when they are doing nothing, and they are not doing anything.

Thoughts by Your Uncle.

Capitalists papers are beginning to whisper that the revolts in the coming winter may be more serious than those which have characterized the past five years. The congested conditions of transportation and the increased cost of living are factors which will add to the difficulties of the people. The transient workers will be more numerous and the cost of their support will be more burdensome. The working class is becoming more radical and is more likely to take advantage of any unsettled condition.

From the war the economic situation has improved, but the prices of the necessities of life have not followed this improvement. The cost of living has increased, and the wages of the workers have not kept pace. The workers are becoming more discontented and are more likely to strike if their demands are not met.

One of the foremost arguments presented by the capitalist papers is that it is not due to the war, but to the policy of the government.

"The war was not the cause of the rising cost of living," they say. "It was the policy of the government which has caused the prices to rise. The government has been too lenient in its control of the prices of the necessities of life. The workers have been too accommodating in their demands. The government should have controlled the prices of the necessities of life and should have enacted laws to prevent the profiteers from taking advantage of the situation.

Another argument presented by the capitalist papers is that the workers are not satisfied with their wages. They say that the wages of the workers have not kept pace with the rising cost of living. They say that the workers are not satisfied with their wages and are more likely to strike if their demands are not met.

The capitalist papers are also presenting the argument that the workers are not satisfied with the conditions of labor. They say that the hours of labor are too long and the conditions of work are too severe. They say that the workers are not satisfied with the conditions of labor and are more likely to strike if their demands are not met.

The capitalist papers are also presenting the argument that the workers are not satisfied with the conditions of the government.
