Dialogue Between a Socialist and a Democrat.

PROGRESS AND RE-ACTION.

Why the Socialist Sees Little Difference Between Capitalist Political Parties.

Doctor.-Well, Mr. Socialist, they tell me you can't see much difference between us democrats and the republi-

Socialist.-There is no practical difference between a republican and a democrat in my humble judgment, The only difference is quite a superficial one-the same difference that there is between a man who would do a good deed but does not know how, and the man who would not if he could. No practical difference, sir, Doctor .- I don't see. Socialist.-Why, the democrats pretend that they recognize the evils that afflict us, and the rank and file of the party (NOT THE MANAGERS AND SLUSH FUND CONTRIBUTORS, MIND YOU), seem earnest in their desire to better matters, but their efforts must always remain futile because, (to use your own parlance, doctor), they cannot properly diagnose the public case and hence prescribe the proper medicine to effect a cure. On the other hand, the republicans deny that the public has cause for complaint. They claffer that the democrats are seeking to poison a well man with their freetrade-free-silver-anti-expansion po tion. The republicans are the Christian Scientists of politics. Their invarlable prescription is: "There is nothing really the matter with the country. It is a disease of the mind. Just let the people imagine that everything is all right and the whole trouble will Doctor.-That is the republican formula to a dot. But I think you are wrong in regard to the efficiency of the democratic nostrum. Now, Mr. Socialist, do you at all doubt that with a ocratic president, house and seaate, the trusts can be legislated out of

have an end." Eh, doctor?

Socialist .- Yes, sir, I surely deny that you can in any way retard the progress of the trust idea. The trust is a natural outgrowth of industry. The trust (or in other words "CO-OPERATION"), rises out of the asher of that much-worshipped folly, COM-PETITION. Even granting that you could destroy the trust, such action would be a step backward in the progress of the race and a POSITIVE IN-JURY TO MANKIND.

Doctor.-Why, my dear sir, do you contend that the trust is a righteous socialist.-Yes and no. The trust is like a good many other things; in the right hands it is a blessing, in the wrong hands it is a curse. What I do contend is that the trust (or "co-operation") is as far ahead of the old competitive system as a locomotive is of an ox wagon. The trust curtails waste and accomplishes a great saving of la- ism would alleviate are merely sympum of one great co-operative concern through the medium of the twenty small competing concerns. Hence the the public benefit, and also the men who have before worked in the comnall wages could all of them be employed by the great co-operative conat better wages.

Doctor.—But, my dear sir, -

Socialist.-Wait just a minute. ow what you are going to say, but first let me give you a practical illustration of the value of co-operation or what is the best organized trust in the country? No? Well, it is the United vantages of this great trust every day Now, suppose the government were out of the business and there were twenty separate mail carrying institutions competing for the business of the coun Twenty postoffices where there is clerks and carriers where there is now one. Do you think you could get a letfive cents? That is a practical illustration, I hope, of the value of the trust. Now doctor, I am ready for

Doctor.-You have based your de fense of the trust on the proposition that it lessens the cost of production, therefore making the article cheaper for the public and at the same time by

TRUSTS AND SILVER employe of a trust ever had his wages raised or his workday shortened, except as some trade union obtained it by fighting for it?

Socialist.-Exactly. Doctor .- How on earth, then, can you advocate an institution whose only purpose seems to be robbery?

Socialist .- Now, I see we are getting to the point. Please remember that I said before that the trust is like a good many other things; in the right hands it is a blessing, in the wrong hands, a curse. The trouble, my dear doctor, is not in the trust as an institution, but in the manner in which the trust is manipulated. The trust in itself is a great economic institution, but under the present unfair distribution of capital in this country the enormous advantages of the trusts all accrue, not to the public or to the producers, but to one small class of capitalists. great saving in production and distri-bution resulting from co-operation is diverted from its proper channel and turned into the pockets of the rich. Doctor-Um-well-what then is you plan for dealing with the trust?

Socialist .- I would say let the public own and operate all the instruments of production and distribution, all the factories, mines, railroads, telegraphs etc., just as they now do the postoffices, highways and public school system. Let every citizen be a capitalist as well as a worker. Then there will be no waste of labor and every man by working a .FEW HOURS EACH DAY AT SOME USEFUL EMPLOY-MENT MAY EARN A SPLENDID LIVELIHOOD.

Doctor .- But how may this be at tained? Would you seize by force the property of the rich?

Socialist .- Oh, no. No such proceeding as that would be necessary. All the government has to do, if the capitalists refuse to sell on fair terms, is to establish plants of its own and sell goods at cost price, so that the advantages of co-operation may be reaped by the people themselves, and the whole system of private ownership would vanish as if by magic. No private concern manufacturing for profit can compete with the government manufacturing for use only. Do I make the matter plain to you?

Doctor.-Um-yes, I think I understaand. But how about bimetalism? That is one plank I hope we agree on.

Socialist .- I can't swallow bimetaism, either. I will explain my views on free silver after your own manner-Doctor.-How is that?

Socialist .- Why after the manner of a physician. Now, dector, suppose you vere called to the bedside of a sick man, the first thing you would do would be to acquaint yourself with all the symptoms of the disease, would you

Dector .- Certainly.

Socialist.-Well, having ascertained o much concerning his case would you proceed to allay or rather beat back some certain one of those symptoms and no more, or would you attack the very groundwork of his disease?

Doctor .- I would fight the disease in its entirety to the best of my skill. Socialist .- Exactly. And our country's ailments present a perfect analo The panies, financial manipula tions, trade depressions, all the multitude of evils which you claim bimetal bor in the departments of production toms of the malady we Socialists call and distribution. The other three fourths is either wasted in the war or is swallowed in the millionaire' profits. The worker is supposed to buy product of his labor. He can't do it therefore his capitalist employer seeks e must perforce shut down his factory and, a panic ensues. So you se this panic which you claim the gold standard brought about really resulted from the fact that the people out of buy back every article their labor had produced. Hence, overproduction, no work, starvation. Under socialism, or public ownership of the instrument of production, all this waste of competition and capitalist's profits will panic will be forever abolished and we will then have the first country on the ty and the pursuit of happiness.

that fact lies the hope for socialism.

Among the many minor "issues" be brought to the attention of th workers during the coming campaign petty capitalism respectively, this que tion of the relative desirability of large standing army or an organize state militia, perhaps shows more that anything else the strong conviction that exists in the capitalist mind as t the utter and absolute idiocy of th workingmen to whom they present as an "issue." To those who under stand in the main the positions take by Republican and Democratic politi cians upon broad economic question it is needless to say that the forme favor a large force of regular troop to act as they term it as "national or licemen" while the latter true to the reactionary principles advocate the or ganization of a state militia for th same purpose. The party of great car tralism see in the regular troops a improved and more effective machin for the repression of possible revo amongst their wage slaves, while th champlons of petty exploitation, cosistent in this as in other things, sti desire to retain the antiquated cumbe some, expensive state militin as th instrument for the preservation of small capitalist "law" and order Looked at merely as a capitalist que tion alone, and eliminating for a m ment the use of a large standing arm for the purpose of "opening up" fresh markets for capitalism abroad, it would certainly seem as if the advo cates of the "national policeman" have far and away the best of the argument. They understand that the "nationa policeman," i. e., regular soldier, re cruited as he is indiscriminately from all parts of the country, is superior as a weapon in their hands to the state militiaman. They see that the former has no local affiliations, no neighborly equaintance with the inhabitants of any manufacturing center against which his weapons are to be used in the interests of his masters. They see on the other hand that with the growth of socialism and general discontenarising out of their "prosperity," a local body is not nearly so trustworthy, as professional fighters gathered proion and whose only idea of solidarity is that which exists within their corps that the regular soldier possesses through his training a far larger share of that "blind obedience" which destroys all scruples on the taking of human life, and makes murder appear an honorable trade. And finally they comprehend that the more efficient weapon is after all the least expensive, which means that a larger amount of the borers will remain in the pessession of their class, when the necessary outlay for the repression of those laborers is educed to the smallest possible amount, and more efficiency secured at the same time. But what is to be capitalist press of the city devoted of workers who are in reality asked ular troops or the local militia? How to them? will they answer at the ballot box when asked to select their executioners? Will they, bearkening to the through the artiquated tube of the big high velocity pellet from the modern bor; and that as shooting, by either will be robbed in a manner of which "national" or "state policeman" would

SNAP SHOTS BY THE WAYSIDE.

The Republicans may be expected to work the "prosperity" racket for all it s worth in the coming campaign. Aleady they are beginning to boast of the increased number of men employed by the railroads, and in due time other branches of industry will also be touted as examples. It is true that work is being increasingly piled upon the shoulders of some of the workers, but those mployed earn but a scanty living at best. The truest evidence of the Republican brand of "prosperity," howver, can be found in the increased dividends which accrue to the workers, the "owners" of the means of production and distribution.

One Winifred Black, a writer on the hicago American, has written an artile bewailing the useless and unhappy life of the late Collis P. Huntington who was debarred from enjoying the treasures of art and literature which he had purchased, by the necessity which compelled him to remain a mere money-getter. The lady then relates an incident which occurred at a country picnic, in which some of her friends were discussing this question.

One of the men present asserted that he would rather be able to enjoy a book or a picture than be a millionaire deprived of such pleasure. His wife then said proudly that she would rather have erence to organizer's tour; State Coma husband like that than be the wife of a billionaire.

All of which is no doubt very pretty and sentimental, but circumstances alter cases. If this man happened to be one of the locked-out workers in the building trades, and his wife involved ganized). in the conditions consequent thereto does mayone think that their contempt for the millionaire would assert itself as strongly as it did at that pleasant pienic party? Is it not far more probable that their present material wants would have made money, and plenty of it, appear as the most desirable thing

The capture of Tien-Tsin and Pekin. gives the Chinese people a last glimpse of the old barbaric method of plunder tims of war, The looting and plunderlow reminds one of the stories of the sacking of cities in the middle ages. But all this will be changed as soon as capitalistic "order" is restored. A new era, bringing with it a new form of of China. The visible thief with his crude methods of robbery, will disappear, and the impersonal, invisible thief, will take his place. The Chinese they at present can have but a very indistinct conception, but the result will be much the same. They will be de-prived of their real property, the proout of this program, they are only interested in making it altogether imduct of their labor, and will be left in much the same state as if they had been looted by the armies of advancing 'civilization."

> The encampment of the G. A. R. recently held in this city shows plainly enough that the veteran survivors of the "late unpleasantness" look not only much the worse for the ravages of time, but that their material conditions also do not seem much better than their physical. And yet there is no doubt that the majority, aye, the great majority of these men enlisted for the conflict thirty-five years ago, through the noblest of motives, yet as a result they have to complain of a government which exists only by virtue of their self-sacrifice.

> How would it be to hold, as a contrast, another encampment of the conrovernment during that conflict? Many our millionaire class, and they will have no complaint against the government.

This world is evidently becoming very tiresome to many of the citizens of Thirty-two suicides in August is the record, and a large proportion of these "shuffled off this mortal coll" by the agency of carbolic acid. WRITTEN BY E. M. STANGLAND.

We are coming, Debs and Harriman, One Milfion Voters Strong. We come from shops and mines, from fields and plains with joyous song, We'll teach the ruling class a point on how to right the wrong,

> While we are marching on. Hall the social Revolution, Cheer the peaceful Revolution, Speed the coming Revolution. The Brotherhood of man

Men and women, children too, are crying out for bread. In their faces hopeless misery and sorrow can be read. We will tell them to be cheerful; we will say: "Lift up your head," For we are marching on!

Our mission is to introduce the glorious commonwealth, And give each one an equal chance in pleasure, work and health, No dudes nor idle parasites to plunder us by stealth, For we are marching on!

Our army is composed of men who do the world's work, In realms of brawn and realms of brain the task we do not shirk.; We have no use for swords or pistols, cannon, powder, dirk, When we are marching on. Chorus:-

We'll give you Debs and Harriman, ten hundred thousand votes. We'll make the welkin ring again with our triumphant notes. We'll make the politician ask what all this noise denotes When we are marching on!

The night of competition is about to pass away, The Brotherhood of men will bring us all a happy day, T'will break the chains of slavery and misery allay, And we are marching on.

Chorus:-The day of small things now has passed, the trusts intend to stay. But OUR UNIVERSAL TRUST will take the trusts some day, We'll all be in it; we'll be in it; we'll sing and shout hurray!

While we are marching on!

Chorus:-

Republicans and Democrats we equally will doubt. The one kills niggers far away, the other in the South. False friends they are to workingmen we long ago found out, And we are marching on.

With charity to all mankind and malice toward none, We yet remember Homestead strike, and later Hazelton And bull pens too-we keep account-till victory is won, While we are marching on.

Then, comrades, let us work and vote for Debs and Harriman. Roll up the vote, keep up the work from Maine to Rio Grande, Wage slavery must cease and men be free throughout the land. For we are marching on!

Chorus:-

The saddest, but at the same time the most glorious and inspiring function I have ever witnessed, is over, and our comrade Wilhelm Liebknecht is at rest in his honored grave.

With heavy hearts we arrived at Ber-lin. To me the sense of personal loss grew keener as we neared Charlottenburg, and it was with a sinking heart that I climbed the stairs to the wellknown and modest fourth floor flat in the Kantstrasse. Many times before had Liebknecht cheerily accompanied me, and now the home he loved so well for all that the whole funeral is indescribable. No written or spoken words can convey any sense whatever of its simplicity, its grandeur, and its best I can use. From seven o'clock this morning tens of thousands of people from all parts of Germany poured into Berlin, and when we reached Charlottenburg we found a living sea of humanity. Once more we ascended to Liebknecht's rooms to take a last farewell. In his sitting-room we found him reposing on the lid of the coffin inscription in bronze which was presented to him by his fellow Reichstag The body had been partially embalmed that covering, and personally I felt that I would rather remember him as I knew him living, with cheery face and laughing eye. A moment we stood, and then we joined at a rendezvous the staff, and the foreign delegates. Then, first to comprehend that the era of tutelage is past and that there can no longer be any talk of good and bad masters. In the same way it is time for the women to know better than to be corrupted by promises of little baubles to be given to those who are willing to play the role of puppets. We come to show them the true value of these promises; to point out that their cowardice and their egoism are being made the gages of their servitude.

The progress of the proletariat on the road to freedom is measured by the development within their ranks of the spirit of justice and solidarity, which alternately illuminates and revivifies, It is a new religion awakening the conscience and calling to combat with the modern weapons of education, organization and the ballot.

Do the women wish to use the same weapons as the men? Why do they refuse the only weapons which at this time are effective in the proletarian revolt? Do not all the proletarians, men and women, suffer equally from hunger, cold, nakedness and overwork? The woman is affected even more than the man by these miseries, and shall she therefore be dealed the right of access to the only effective means of defense? Do the women suffer less than the men from the deprivation of the opportunity of cultivating, developing and realizing their mind. And is not such a deadening of an intellect always a injury to the whole proletariat?

Is war a lighter blow to the woman than to the man? For every man that falls upon the battlefield there are women and children who die the slow it is ituation. The political situation in Italy is fully fully saw within the situation in Italy is fully fully saw; which is full of its profession, and it is fully for the disorder that the women in the Many within the cecition, at which the Socialists hade decided gains, and it throws much light on the disorder that the working Class Movement in formation. women and children who die the slow cruel death of hunger and neglect. Do you think then that the conscience of the woman will be less ardent than that of the man in invoking peace? And who, if not the victims themselves, will raise a most energetic and continuous opposition against the two monsters that, menace and devour us -alcoholism and social debauchery?

The sorrows that strike the proletarian, whether of mind or body, make no distinction of sex, but fall upon the whole proletarian class. Every resignation by an individual is equivalent to an abandonment of the common cause; every alliance with the ancient ruler is treason, whatever may be the sex of the coward and tratior.

This is why, in the struggle of the proletariat, under the sun of justice, in the name of solidarity, each and everyone ought to take in their hands the best weapons, the only faithful and effective ones, education, organization and the ballot.

This is the true meaning of the emancipation of woman and the beginning of the twentieth century. -L Gatti de Gamond, in "Le Peuple."

'A mass meeting of class-conscious Labor Day, September 3rd, the speakers being Comrades Bard, Lowenthal, Collins, Baur and Sommerville The meeting was hot from start to finish, and the mouthings of the economic idiots Bryan and Roosevelt were scored ut mercy. Several rabid Demo rats became so excited over the truths told about Bryan's ignorance of economics that for lack of argument they started a persistent yelling and howling to drown the voices of the speakers. One indignant bystander, conscious of his mental inability to launch an argument against socialism, attempted to launch a brick at those who were propounding it. He was doing the best he could, but even then he missed the ob-ject aimed at by several feet. The suce, however, who listened intently, quickly suppressed the disturbers, and the meeting continued uninterrupted to hundreds of papers were sold, and the comrades report that even the brickpurchase a certain quantity of Socialist literature, which if he makes proper use of, he will discover that he has provided himself with a weapon far superior to bricks in an intellectual combat. After the meeting was concluded the comrades joined in the cry, Debe and Harriman, rab, rab, rab, which was joined in by hundreds of the audience, an incident which gives promise that the number of workingmen that spouters of the Bryan and Roosevelt type can fool, grows constantly smaller year by year. # The International Socialist Review

On the first of July, 1909, we began the publication of the International So-cialist Review, clitted by A. M. Simons, with the help of many of the best-known socialist writers of Europe and known socialist writers of Europe and America.

The July and August numbers have amply redeemed the promises made in our prospectus. The July number contains a searching and thoughtful article by Rev. William T. Brown, entitled. Plutocracy and Democracy," and a contribution of world-wide interest by H. M. Hyndman, entitled. "England and International Socialism." Jean Longuet, the grandson of Karl Marx, serds a letter explaining the status of French political parties and the results of the recent legislative election in Belgum. Both of these letters have encouraging news of the rapid growth of Socialism. Marcus Hitch contributes a thoughtful and scholarly article on Karl Marx and the money question, and Max S. Hayes gives a review of the relations of the trade unions to Socialism in the United States. The editor traces the growth of Socialist thought in America, comments on the attack of capitalism upon China, and reviews the great lock-out of the so claims thought in America, comments on the attack of capitalism upon China, and reviews the great lock-out of the building trades in Chicago, and the strike of street car men in St. Louis. The August number opens with an exhaustive study of the Chicago dock-out by S. G. Lindholm. The political situation in Rally is fully described by our regular corresponders. The Questions, 'the editor points out why the Republican and Demogratic politicians, by common coment are avoiding any serious discussion of the trusts, the negro question, government by injunction and the idaho buil pen, while the anti-expansion issue is being spoiled by the unanimous desire of capitalists to get their share of China. Prof. Ely's "Monopolics and Trusts" is reviewed at some length, and other books more briefly. A fiew department, "The World of Labor," edited by Max S. Hayes, begins in this issue and will be a regular feature of the Review.

The September number gromises to be the strongest number of a periodical relating to Socialism yet issued in the English language. Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist nominee for President, will have a strong and interesting article on the "Outlook fer Socialism in the United States," reviewing and discussing the movements in American society that are making for Socialism. Job Harriman, the Vice-Presidential candidate will supplement this with "A Comparison of the Democratic and Republican Platforms in the Present Campaign," which is the most thorough discussion of the issues presented by the two old parties yet put out. These two articles alone would make this number the most valuable propaganda pamphlet ever issued for the price, yet they are but a small part of what the whole number contains. Rgv. Charles H. Vall is one of the ablest exponents of Socialism writing in the English language at the present time. Under the title "The
