The Workers' Call.
A Lesson From Chicago's Election

AUGUSTUS, 1877.

The Workers' Call, Chicago, Ill., March 2, 1877.

Although three months have passed since the close of the Chicago elections, some of the aspects of the affair are still fresh in the minds of the people. The question of the election of April 17th has been the topic of conversation in Chicago and in every other city of the Union. It is represented that the Chicago citizens are in a state of excitement and alarm. The City Hall has been the scene of considerable activity. The Mayor, the aldermen, the people of the city, and the citizens of other cities, are all greatly interested in the matter. The situation is a serious one, and it is expected that the affairs of the city will be improved under the new administration.

Theodore Roosevelt, the new Mayor of Chicago, has been invested with a great deal of power. His influence is felt in every part of the city. He has made many changes in the administration, and the people are looking forward to better days. The new administration is expected to do much for the city. The Mayor is a man of high character, and it is thought that he will do much to improve the condition of the city.

The new administration has been successful in several respects. They have introduced a number of important measures, and the people are satisfied with the results.
