SOCIALISM AND REFORM

Well known party members give their views on the Detroit Consensus, or Reciprocal Agreement of Revolutionary Socialism. Lack of a common factor, fatal to all such agreements, is the question. The idea of "Consensus," the class struggle must be accepted by all, the Socialist platform for social betterment.

1.

The Detroit Consensus is not a consensus of the working people. It is an agreement of men with different interests, different ideas, different visions of the world. It is an agreement that seeks to bring together different groups of workers under a common banner, the Socialist banner.

2.

The Socialist platform is not a platform that can be adopted by all. It is a platform that is based on the idea of working people coming together to build a better world. It is a platform that is based on the idea of working people coming together to build a better world.
