In the State Legislature.

The writer considers himself fortunate in being one of the few intelligent and informed persons who, as members of the Massachusetts Legislature, have had the opportunity of securing information on the recent political fiascos. He is justly proud of his country, and of the fine men who represent it in Congress. These men have been, and are, a constant source of inspiration to him. Their speeches, their discussions, their votes, have all been a source of comfort and inspiration to him. He is grateful to them for their tireless work and unswerving devotion to the cause of liberty and justice.

The writer wonders what the future holds for our nation, and what will become of it. He hopes that it will continue to be a great nation, and that it will always be free and independent. He hopes that it will always be a nation of peace and plenty, and that it will always be a nation of freedom and democracy.

The writer believes that the future of our nation depends on the actions of its leaders, and that the leaders of our nation must always remember their responsibility to the people. They must always remember that they are the representatives of the people, and that they are accountable to the people. They must always remember that they are responsible for the welfare of the people, and that they must always work to improve the lives of the people.
