THE RISE OF LABOR

Revise on any past Labor Day will have organized labor confronted by one unbearable task as keenly as it is at present. It is impossible to look at the future with assurance. The great strike of miners that has been in progress for two months has resulted in nothing but bitter memories of the old methods. The capital of the world's best industries, the center of the world's most powerful and prosperous industries, has been a scene of wrangling, reading, and strike-breaking. The problems of the future will be for the strike and its results, for the miners and the investors.

The financial assets of the world are in the hands of the capitalists, the property of which the interests of a half century or even of a single year are placed upon. The interests and the profits of the capitalists are the real business and the real concern of the world. The interests and the profits of the capitalists are ever the same. The interests and the profits of the capitalists are the only interests and the only profits of the world.

It is not alone that these industrial relations have grown monstrous. It is not alone that they have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the interests of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the interests of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the income of the capitalists has grown monstrous. It is not alone that the income of the capitalists has grown monstrous. It is not alone that the profits of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the profits of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the wages of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the wages of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the hours of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the hours of the capitalists have grown monstrous. It is not alone that the hours of the capitalists have grown monstrous.

To the observer whose vision is clouded by the 'great' than the 'small' the outlook of capital is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same.

The situation is one of economic warfare, and in it capitalist are all against the working class. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same. The capitalist from Wall Street to the corner grocer is the same.
