The Kellogg Strike Committee—Henry D. Lloyd Talks on Municipal Ownership—The Spectre of Socialism

Last Friday the price of the Chicago Federation of Labor had the Kellogg Strike Committee on the spot. The memo to the committee was made by Mr. Kellogg. Mr. Kellogg, in his speech, said that the Kellogg Strike Defense Fund Committee should be noted by the speech made by Mr. Kellogg. The committee should consider this action.

The Kellogg Strike Committee is a group of people who support the Kellogg Strike and are fighting for the rights of the strikers. The Kellogg Strike was a labor strike that lasted from 1917 to 1918. The committee was formed to support the strikers and to fight for their rights.

Henry D. Lloyd, a labor leader, spoke at a meeting on municipal ownership. He discussed the benefits of municipal ownership, which includes the provision of essential services such as electricity, water, and gas at affordable rates.

He also talked about the spectre of socialism, which is a belief in government control and ownership of the means of production. Lloyd argued that socialism is not necessary and that municipal ownership is a better alternative.

INDUSTRIAL PEACE

Peace between capital and labor, that is all they ask.

The trouble is peace between capital and labor. It is the only thing needed to bring about industrial peace. There is a feeling of peace in history that is not lasting years of death.

There is no need to fear a long period of peace.

It is well when labor and the capitalists meet in good faith and justice and peace, forevermore.

—Ernest Hemingway

UNION AND NON-UNION

While the great sins of workers in organized trades that have formed a union and are able to control the wages of the followers of the capital that is employed in the shops are the same as in the shops that are not organized, the laborer in the organized shop is better off. He has better opportunities for advancement, better conditions of work, and in other words, aside from the question of the earnings of the workers, his life is far better off.

The workers in the organized shop have a chance to get ahead, and they get ahead.

—Robert M. La Follette

THOMAS J. HAGERTY

Thomas J. Hagerty, a labor leader, has been an active participant in many organizations that fight for workers' rights. He has worked tirelessly to improve the working conditions of workers and to ensure that they are treated fairly.

HAGERTY ON UNIONS

"The laborer should not be afraid of a strike. It is not a menace to the laborer. It is an opportunity for the laborer to improve his working conditions.

Thomas J. Hagerty

ELEPHANT WORKERS ON STRIKE

Over 1,000 railroad workers have been on strike for over a week. They are not for the benefit of the workers, but for the benefit of the workers. They are asking for better working conditions.

"The workers are not asking for anything more than what they are entitled to. They are asking for justice.

William Z. Foster

HIS BERN FOR HUMANITY

London, Aug. 16—During the recent strike in London, the first of its kind in the history of that city, the workers were faced with the task of organizing and mobilizing.

"They were determined to fight for their rights. They were determined to win.

—William T. Stead

For better—Two steady families residing on one, a one-mile by two, two-room house, living in a comfortable manner. For worse—They will be turned out into the street, their house to be condemned.

—Henry C. Adams

We are far from the idea that there is no such thing as a comfortable life. There is a comfortable life, but it is a life of struggle and work. It is a life of struggle and work, but it is a life worth living.
