CRIMES OF CAPITALISM... IN COLORADO.

BY EUGENE V. DEBS.

The greed and self-interest of the great trusts and monopolies is as great today as it was when such trusts first developed. The trusts of today are as powerful and as much feared as the trusts of yesterday. The trusts are more numerous, more powerful, and more menacing than ever before. They control the very life of our nation. They control the very life of our people. They control the very life of our world.

The trusts are the cause of all the social, economic, and political problems that we face today. They are the cause of all the poverty, suffering, and oppression that we see. They are the cause of all the wars, conflicts, and upheavals that we endure. They are the cause of all the misery, despair, and hopelessness that we live.

The trusts are the cause of all the problems that we face today. They are the cause of all the problems that we will face tomorrow. They are the cause of all the problems that we will face forever.

ARBITRATION AND THE MINER.

A Case of Cold Comfort.

BY OBSERVER.

An article in the "Daily Worker," the Daily Newspaper of the American Federation of Labor, entitled "The Make-Work Movement," has just been published, giving an account of the methods by which the International Harvester Company has been able to make its employees work harder and longer than they are normally expected to work.

The International Harvester Company is the largest manufacturer of farm machinery in the world, and is also one of the largest employers of labor. The company manufactures a wide variety of farm implements, such as plows, harrows, reapers, and mowers, as well as a number of other agricultural implements.

The company has a large number of employees, both skilled and unskilled. The skilled employees are generally paid a piece rate, while the unskilled employees are paid a piece rate and a bonus for each day they work. The company also maintains a large number of maintenance men, who are employed to keep the machinery in good working order.

The "Daily Worker" article states that the International Harvester Company has been able to increase its output by 25% in the past year, and that this increase has been achieved by making its employees work longer and harder than they are normally expected to work. The company has been able to do this by using the "make-work" system, which involves the employment of workers on tasks that are not normally required, or that are not normally performed by the company.

The "Daily Worker" article goes on to say that the International Harvester Company is not alone in using the "make-work" system. Other large manufacturers, such as the Ford Motor Company and the General Motors Corporation, are also using the same system to increase their output.

The "Daily Worker" article concludes by saying that the "make-work" system is a form of exploitation, and that it is unfair to the workers who are forced to work harder and longer than they are normally expected to work.
