THE LION AND THE FOX.

BY ERNEST UNTERMANN.

The Lion and the Fox is a classical folktale, often taught in schools, which tells the story of a lion that is tricked by a clever fox. In this story, the fox is able to get the lion to leave his pride and go into the forest alone, where the fox then cunningly convinces the lion to eat a poisoned berry. The lion dies, and the fox eats the berry, thus gaining the lion's place in the pride.

The story is often used as a metaphor for the power of cunning and trickery, and the dangers of trusting those who are not trustworthy.
