FOR INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION.

Manifesto Issued Calling for a Convention
June 27, 1905.

BASED ON THE CLASS STRUGGLE.
The Document Calls to the Laborer to Unite in a Compact Industrial Plan.

The following statement was issued in the course of a conference held in this city last week by representatives of many leading unions in the city, at the request of the late Workers' party.

Social relations and production for the common good, as well as the abolition of the two-party system, accords in the principle of the state, are the displacement of human will by the influence of the industrial plan.

Because of the fact that the means of production are divided into different categories, and the man who works does not own the instruments of his labor...the working man's only mode of retaining control of his daily labor is to unite with his fellow workers in a collective organization of their own.

This union must be able to maintain itself against the attacks of the capitalistic class, and it must be able to maintain itself against the attacks of the government.

The social relations and production for the common good, as well as the abolition of the two-party system, are the displacement of human will by the influence of the industrial plan.
STAMPING OUT SOCIALISM.

If in the Chicago Union that the most effective way to win social recognition is through training in technical schools. While some schools in Chicago and elsewhere have done good work in social work, there is little evidence of such an attitude in the majority of technological schools. This is not to say that the majority of Chicago schools are not doing good work in social work, but simply that their attitude toward social work is not evident in the courses they offer. If one survey the courses offered by Chicago schools, he will find that social work is often treated as an afterthought, if at all. While some schools offer social work as a separate course, it is usually considered as a part of the general curriculum rather than as a separate field of study. This lack of emphasis on social work can be attributed to the fact that most technological schools are interested primarily in the training of engineers and technicians, and that they consider social work as an unnecessary and unprofitable addition to their curriculum. As a result, social work is often given short shrift in these schools, and the students are not given the opportunity to specialize in this field. This is unfortunate, as social work is a vital and important field of study, and the training received in these schools will be of little use to the students if they do not have the opportunity to specialize in this field. The Chicago Union recommends that all technological schools make a serious effort to improve their social work programs, and that they give this field the attention that it deserves. By doing so, they will be providing their students with a valuable training in social work, and they will be doing a service to society as well.
SOCIALLY NEWS IN BRIEF.
Progress of the Working Class in This and Other Lands.

The comrades of the International Socialist party in New York announced last week that a proposal of the Socialist party of that city, to hold a district meeting in every borough of the city at least once a month, had been adopted. The proposal was adopted by the Socialists in the Bronx borough, and will now be considered by the other districts of the city. The purpose of the meetings is to discuss the progress of the working class in New York and to consider ways and means of furthering its interests.

The International Socialist party has made great progress in the United States in recent years, and has gained a large following among the working class. The party is committed to the principles of socialism, which it defines as a social and economic system in which the means of production are owned and controlled by the community as a whole, rather than by individuals or corporations.

The Journal of the Socialist party of New York, which is published bi-weekly, has been an important instrument in the party's efforts to educate the working class on the issues at hand. The Journal is available for free online, and can be accessed at www.journalofsocialism.org.

The Socialist party of New York is committed to working with other socialist organizations in the United States and around the world to further the cause of socialism and to improve the lives of working people everywhere.
