THE SECOND, THIRD AND FOURTH VOLUMES OF MARX'S "CAPITAL".

BY ERNST UNTERMANN.

Continued from last week.

The second, third and fourth volumes of Marx's "Capital." In the second we have the production of capital, the history of how the surplus value of labor, which is the source of the capital in the process of production, is transformed into a commodity, into capital goods, and how the surplus of capital goods is transformed into a surplus of commodities, and how the surplus of commodities is transformed into a surplus of capital goods. In the third we have the history of how the surplus of capital goods is transformed into a surplus of commodities, and how the surplus of commodities is transformed into a surplus of capital goods. In the fourth we have the history of how the surplus of capital goods is transformed into a surplus of commodities, and how the surplus of commodities is transformed into a surplus of capital goods.

THE PARTY GOVERNS NOT THE MARKET.

The party governs not the market. It is the market that governs the party. The party is the reaction of the social forces to the market. The market is the reaction of the social forces to the party. The party is the expression of the market. The market is the expression of the party. The party is the manifestation of the market. The market is the manifestation of the party. The party is the expression of the market. The market is the expression of the party.
