PROGRESS OF THE CONVENTION

As we go to press this week the deliberations of the 1905 convention of the Socialist Labor Party of America are in full swing. The convention, which convened last Thursday, is being held at the YMCA Hotel in New York City.

The convention is called to order by President C. H. Hueck, who presided over the previous session. He is assisted by Vice President E. S. Davis and Secretary J. W. Miller. The convention is made up of delegates from all parts of the country, representing a total of about 20,000 members of the party.

The convention is expected to consider a number of important questions, including the relationship of the party to the labor movement, the role of the party in the struggle for socialism, and the party's position on various social and economic issues.

The convention is also expected to adopt a new constitution for the party, which will be submitted to the membership for approval.

The convention will conclude its work on Monday, with the adoption of a resolution endorsing the program of the party and expressing its support for the international movement for socialism.

THE ETHICS OF SOCIALISM ARE IDENTICAL WITH THE ETHICS OF CHRISTIANITY.

-E N C Y C L O P E D I A B R I T A N N I A -

The characteristics of the unclean creatures are in the picture are well known. There is the horesly which commons mainly upon the blood of the horse; the vacchus, accustomed with its featherless head and tail and feeding upon the dead putrefying bodies of animals; the hyena, which also feeds upon carrion. All of them pass by the dead body of the horse or bear and devour the foul-smelling thing: John H. W. Newsom's Chicago Chronicle.

The capitalistic excess of the big companies of the industrial world is well known. The factories and workshops of the world are filled with the cries of the exploited workers. The classes of the world are divided into the haves and the have-nots. But the worst of all is the exploitation of the workers and the inhumanity of the bosses.

The Socialist Party, which is made up of the workers and the poor, is the only party that is truly democratic and that represents the interests of the working class.

The convocation of this convention is a step forward in the struggle for socialism. It is a step towards the establishment of a true democratic society, where all men are free and equal.

The delegates from the American Federation of Labor and the Knights of Labor, who are at the convention, are trying to work out a program that will be acceptable to the working class.

The convention is expected to adopt a new constitution for the party, which will be submitted to the membership for approval.

ECONOMIC INTERPRETATION OF HISTORY

W. S. Ghent in "Mass and Class."

The doctrine that the prevailing mode of production and exchange is the main determining factor in human affairs is known as "the economic interpretation of history." This doctrine is formulated by Karl Marx, who is coming to be recognized even by those who do not accept all his conclusions and who argue against the interpretation of the nineteenth century. Marx draws an unfavorable name for the doctrine against the abstract nature of society, and the "economic interpretation of history" and most of his followers continue to say it is "nonsensical" and does not have any real social significance. Marx holds that "man is the only class" and that man can only be defined as a "class" and a "society" if he is defined in terms of his interests, institutions, and social forms. In this paper, Marx argues that "men can only be defined as a class in terms of their interests, institutions, and forms of social life, and cannot be defined in terms of their economic position."

THE DESTRUCTION OF A SOCIALIST.

"Under this head the usual phrase "fractional conflict" describes the condition of the American labor movement." What is the condition of the American labor movement? The "fractional conflict" is a common phrase used to describe the condition of the American labor movement. The term "fractional conflict" refers to the conflict among different factions or groups within the labor movement. This conflict is often characterized by differences in ideology, strategy, and tactics. The condition of the American labor movement is characterized by a lack of unity among the labor movement and a lack of a clear and unified strategy. This phenomenon is often referred to as "fractional conflict." A PERPLEXING SITUATION

A British vessel was some days away from a fort in the interior of the island of Cuba. The news of her departure had been telegraphed to the Isthmian Biological Bureau in Washington, D.C. The news was received with great concern, as the vessel was loaded with scientific equipment and samples for a major expedition to the West Indies.

The expedition was led by Dr. James R. Bingham, a renowned entomologist and biologist. His team was expected to conduct various research projects, including the study of the insect population in the Caribbean region.

Dr. Bingham's team had been promised a secure base of operations in the fort, which was equipped with modern facilities and a dedicated staff. However, due to unforeseen circumstances, the vessel was forced to leave the fort without completing its mission.

The vessel was carrying a cargo of rare and endangered species, which were vital for the research project. The loss of these specimens could have serious implications for the future of the expedition.

The Isthmian Biological Bureau was working to mitigate the damage and ensure that the research project could continue. They were in contact with various organizations to secure alternative funding and resources.

The situation was described as "perplexing" by Dr. Bingham, who expressed his concern over the loss of the specimens and the impact it could have on the future of the expedition.

EDITORIAL

The Chicago Socialist, July 8, 1912

One of the most pressing issues in the current political landscape is the question of national defense. In recent years, the government has been under increasing pressure to increase its military spending and build up its armed forces. This has led to a debate over the role of the military in society and the potential for militarism to undermine democratic values.

The Socialist Party, as a leading voice of the working class, has always been a strong advocate of peace and international cooperation. We believe that the military should be abolished and replaced with a system of international law and arbitration. Only through such a system can we hope to bring about a world in which all nations live in peace and harmony.

We urge all workers to support the Socialist Party and its platform of peace and international cooperation. Together, we can build a world without war and free from the threat of militarism.

TEMPERANCE RESOLUTION VALUABLE

Editor of the Socialist:

Will you kindly address me regarding the importance and timely nature of individual and covenanted temperance resolutions—such as have been frequently endorsed by Socialist leaders, and are now being re-issued with force by the National Temperance Union and the Republican party? Is it not convenient at this time to end the discussion of questions of temperance, and to take up one at the beginning of the New Year, re-opening the debate of the question of the consumption and control of alcoholic drinks?

M. A. R.

The editor replies: "A temperance resolution can be of importance to the Socialist as well as to the temperance man. It is of the utmost importance that we should not only have the temperance movement for the sake of the temperance man, but that we should have it for the sake of all mankind. The temperance movement is not only a means of preventing the consumption of alcohol, but it is also a means of preventing the consumption of all other vices. It is a means of improving the character of the individual, and of improving the character of the community. It is a means of promoting the welfare of all mankind.

THE SOCIAL FUND.

"The main factor in the production of wealth among civilized men is the social organism, the machinery of associated labor and exchange by the use of which the individual can turn the product of his labor to his own account, and the individual can operate one another's product and mutually complement one another's industry, thereby increasing the net product of the world one great machine.

This very true even under private capitalism, and it is true of the social organism as a whole, but of course it is far more true of modern than when the machinery of exchange is confined to barter. The social organism is a machine of the utmost importance to the world's welfare, and its efficiency is to the utmost extent.

The element in the total industrial process that is of most importance to the efficiency of the social organism is the difference between the value of what one man produces as a worker and the value of what he gets as a consumer. This is the factor that improves the efficiency of the social organism in a condition of isolation. Working in concert with his fellows by and of his own consent, he improves the efficiency of his labor, and the value of the net product, by the highest luxury and refinement. Filling in solitude, human experience that is to be expressed, and by the more abundant and varied produce to keep himself alive and healthy. It is estimated, I believe, that the amount of the social organism is equivalent to about thirty dollars a week.

The product of the same man working in isolation would probably be only one dollar a week.

In conclusion, the government system, so-called, can be more or less effective, but not to anything with less than the production of wealth collectively.

"Manifesto to society collectively— to the general fund—"

In the dark hours that I have been for the past couple of weeks, the reports we have received from the workers in the factories have been very heartening. The strike is definitely in the interest of the workers, and they are fighting for a better future. We hope that the strike will be successful, and that the workers will be able to secure the wages they deserve. The fight for the workers’ rights is a fight for the future of our country, and we should all support the workers in their struggle.
