RANK AND FILE MUST DECIDE.

One of Marxism's great men, having given an interesting speech before the labor council of Minneapolis, and apparently moved by the desire of the workers to see himself in all the important actions of the party, has just sent the following message to the local leaders:

"I am very sorry that I could not attend the meeting last night. It is a great pity that the local leaders cannot express their ideas in person. I must say, however, that the speeches which were made were not very good. I hope that the workers will continue to work hard and that the local leaders will not forget to send me reports of their work."
