SHALL WE HOLD A NATIONAL CONVENTION IN 1906?

Shall the Socialist party hold a convention in 1906? Here is the Socialist question. Socialism and most everything that pertains to its greatest triumphs and successes from every standpoint, is the result of different types of labor. But no matter how much we may differ on minor points, all agree on the present state of industrial and social development, and the necessity of bringing our political and economic institutions into line with the general business of existing conditions, both public and private, in preparing the ground for the results of the Socialist program.

During the course of their discussion the question of the tremendous upheaval and confusion in the Socialist party in 1893, the crisis was discussed at length. Discouraging as the best methods of bringing new unity and order to the Socialist party, it was feared that the advantage the industrial movement and the political machinery of the country would be greatly to its advantage in a national convention. A convention of the kind mentioned above, how much it would mean in the promotion of unity and order in the Socialist movement.

The building of a national convention in 1906 will enable the Socialists to determine the future course of action in this crisis.

There is a very good idea that there will be a great excitement in the Socialists in the movement for a convention in 1906. If this excitement reaches another serious crisis, it will once more control, the machinery of this party. The members of the party, and the institutions of the movement. If this excitement spreads, it will mean a revolution in the Socialist party in 1906, which will be a fresh crisis in the movement.

The national convention in 1906 will be the test of the Socialist party, the campaign of 1906 will be the test of the Socialist party. The results of the national convention in 1906 will be the test of the Socialist party. The results of the national convention in 1906 will be the test of the Socialist party. The results of the national convention in 1906 will be the test of the Socialist party.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

The end of the world is often spoken of as an event which will bring about a great change. The word "world" is used in different senses, and the end of the world is often spoken of as an event which will bring about a great change.
