BLOODY SUNDAY DEMONSTRATION.

Scarce a day passes without a spectacle of some sort. Violence may be expected in any big city, anywhere, for some reason or other. But it is surprising to learn that this week, the period in which the preparations for the parade were in full swing, brought with it a number of demonstrations.

In the days of the depression, when the streets were crowded with people carrying signs and banners, the police were often called upon to keep order. But now that the streets are empty, the demonstrations are fewer and less frequent. The police are not called upon to keep order, but they are often called upon to assist in the parade.

The Socialist party has been organizing demonstrations for some time, and the parade was part of its plans. The Socialist party has been organizing demonstrations for some time, and the parade was part of its plans.

Belgium has a tradition of union activity, and the recent organizing drive by the United States workers against the employers in the coal mines has been well received. The workers are trying to form a federation of different unions in order to strengthen their position against the employers. The United States workers have been successful in organizing several coal mines, and now they are looking forward to forming a national federation of miners.

SOLDIERS UNIONS

BY GERT K. MILLER.

The soldiers unions in Russia are an indication of the growth of a new social order. The soldiers, who have been disillusioned by the war, are now demanding the right to organize and to strike. The government has been forced to recognize this demand, and the soldiers unions are now playing an important role in the political life of the country.
