ROOSEVELT USES INVESTIGATIONCOMMISSIONER'S REPORT AS "BIG STICK."

Executive's Action Very Near to Blackmail—Packers Threatened with Exposure if They Fight Bonus Bill—Four Pages More of Depositions In Bonus Bill Investigation.

Some weeks since the President of the United States appointed a commission of investigation to inquire into the meat-packing industry, a movement has been going on in connection with the work of this commission, which has the appearance of being an attempt to blackma. It is understood that the commission, in order to learn the working conditions in the packing houses, has offered to name names of men who are connected with the packing industry. The names of the men who are to be included on the list are not given out. Some means of exposure is thus threatened for the men who are not willing to take the risk of losing their jobs by refusing to be named.

In some cases the men are being offered a bribe to name the names of their associates, but in other cases the threat is made that exposure will be made public unless the men agree to the demands of the commission. This is an attempt to get at the men from the inside, and it is understood that the commission has a great deal of power.

The President has been criticized for using the threat of exposure as a "big stick." Many men have been threatened with exposure if they do not agree to the demands of the commission.
