MOTIVE TO ACTION

How Self-Interested Constitutes the Only Logical Incense.

PHILANTHROPIC SELFISHNESS

Who Makes the Donations, the Undertakings, and the Laws for the Poor? By Archibald N. Steward.

To be the successful solution of a problem, or to be the cause of any considerable change, it is necessary that the motive be strong enough to overcome the inertia of the human spirit. Self-interest, by its very nature, is a strong motive, and when directed toward the good of humanity, can be a more powerful force than any other. The philanthropist who acts purely out of self-interest is simply taking advantage of the situation to further his own ambitions, while the philanthropist who acts out of self-sacrifice is truly philanthropic.

It is well known that the success of a philanthropic enterprise depends upon the willingness of the public to support it. The public is more likely to support a movement if it is seen to be in their own best interest. This is why philanthropy often fails to achieve its goals. The philanthropist must be able to convince the public that the proposed change is in their best interest, and that they will benefit from it. This is why it is often said that the success of a philanthropic enterprise depends upon the ability of the philanthropist to persuade the public.

This is why it is often said that the success of a philanthropic enterprise depends upon the ability of the philanthropist to persuade the public.

The motive to action, therefore, is the primary factor in determining the success of a philanthropic enterprise. Whether it is financial, social, or political, the motive to action is the driving force that propels the philanthropist to take action. The motive to action is the primary factor in determining the success of a philanthropic enterprise.

This is...
Socialist Labor Party of the United States

PLATFORM.

The Socialist Labor Party of the United States, believing in the transcendent importance of the economic problem, seeks the establishment of a society in which the labor of mankind shall be voluntarily organized to the end that its products may be distributed to all men, according to their individual needs. We believe that the foundation of a social order should be laid upon the production for the public use of all the material resources of the earth. We believe in the production and distribution of all the products of labor without the intervention of private ownership and the exploitation of man by man.

Socialism is not the mere opposite of Capitalism; it is the transition from one to the other. The means of production must be in common use, but the social relations of production remain the same. They are the relations of exploitation and oppression which Socialism seeks to abolish.

The Socialist Labor Party of the United States, therefore, stands for the complete abolition of private ownership of the means of production, distribution, and exchange, and the substitution of the ownership and control of these means by the community as a whole. This is the only solution of the economic problem. It is the only means by which the labor of the world can be subjected to the control of the world's laboring class. This is the only way in which the working class can control the means of production and distribution, and the only way in which the working class can control its own destiny.

Socialism is not an abstract theory; it is a practical program. It is the program of the Socialist Labor Party of the United States.

Immediate Demands.

1. The immediate demand of the Socialist Labor Party of the United States is the immediate and unconditional transfer of all the means of production, distribution, and exchange to the control and ownership of the community as a whole.
