BY MAX SHACKMAN

Among the numerous resolutions which have been introduced in Congress in the past few weeks, the following is of particular importance: the introduction of the Anti-Child Labor Amendments to both the Senate and the House of Representatives. The movement is a direct result of the efforts of the Child Labor League, which has been working for the past several years to bring about the abolition of child labor. The amendments received a significant amount of support from both sides of the aisle, and are expected to be voted on in the near future.

Working Class Education

By LOUIS BRAINTMAN

In order to be a militant young worker, you must know the roots of your oppression. Those roots are not simply in the actions of the bosses and the state, but in the economic and social relations of production. The struggle of the working class is not just a struggle against the immediate oppressors, but a struggle against the system of production itself. To understand this, you must study the history of capitalism, the rise and fall of the working class, and the role of workers in society.

15,000 Child Slaves Used to Harvest for California Growers

(Special to 'The Young Worker')

SAN FRANCISCO—Revolutionizing the lives of child slaves! This is the hope of the recent victory by the United Farm Workers Union (UFW) in California. For years, children as young as five have been forced to work long hours in the fields, picking grapes and other fruit. But now, thanks to the UFW's efforts, these children can look forward to a better life.

Child Labor Increases Three Fold

Recent developments in the number of child laborers in New York have caused widespread concern among workers. The number of children under the age of 10 engaged in hazardous work has increased from 4,200 to 1,200 in the last year. This is a threefold increase over the previous year. The UFW is calling for an immediate investigation into the causes of this crisis and the implementation of stronger laws to protect children.

We, the Young People’s League of America, recognizing the seriousness of the situation, that the Y.P.L.A. is not alone in this work, and that the Young Workers League of America has been fighting for the rights of the working class, therefore, we appeal to all those organizations that are doing this work to unite with us and form a single organization of this type. We have therefore passed the following resolution:

Do What You Say

Mr. Union Man?

Out of every hundred men and women who enter the world of work, only one stands behind his or her union. They enter the ranks of the class of competitors who are out there. There are only the few who are in the world of work. Industrial workers are in the minority. The vast majority are out there.

Vets ‘Boo’ Cooledge

And Mellon at Bonus Rally Held in Chicago

(Chicago) — Filling the Chicago Coliseum to capacity with the nappy audience of the American Legion, the, as usual, vociferous "Boo Boys" of the American Legion, taunted C. M. 'Boo' Cooledge and A. W. Mellon at the rally here today. The Bosses' boys warned the nation's new President that he would have to keep a look out for "Bosans," "Broncos," and "Bulls," if he was to stand a chance of winning the next election.

What Does the Boss Say

Mr. Union Man?

It is a terrible thing to see the bosses of the world standing behind the unions and the bosses of the world standing against the unions. The bosses are in a minority, and the unions are in a majority. But the bosses have a lot of power, and they are not afraid to use it. The bosses are the ones who have the money, and they are the ones who have the influence. They are the ones who have the power, and they are the ones who have the clout.

School Struggle Looms Big Chicago as Centre Point

By NAT KAPLAN

On October 1, 1932, Cook County Juvenile Court, in the state of Illinois decided to discharge “the young Negro boy” from the home of his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin E. Young, Jr., a Negro boy who had been arrested on a charge of “trespassing” on a white man’s property. The parents were given 30 days to either pay a fine or find a home for the boy. The court ruled that the boy was a menace to society and that his continued presence in the home would be detrimental to his parents. The decision was met with widespread protest, and the case became a symbol of the growing racial tensions in Chicago at the time.

The Chicago Teachers' Federation (CTF) also took up the case, and they demanded that the boy be returned to his parents. The federation argued that the boy was not a menace to society and that his continued presence in the home would not be detrimental to his parents. The federation also argued that the court’s decision was based on a misunderstanding of the facts of the case.

The case was eventually settled, and the boy was returned to his parents. The Chicago Teachers' Federation continued to fight for the rights of minority students in Chicago and played a crucial role in the development of the civil rights movement in the city.

The Sale of An Apetite

By PAUL LAFARGE

Walking along the wharves, the water exhaled the air. Fishermen sat with their nets and their fish, and the sounds of the sea were everywhere. Suddenly, a man approached the group and began to talk. His name was Henry, and he spoke in a language that none of the others understood.

“Fishermen,” he said, “we must unite. Our nets are empty, and the sea is unkind. We must find a way to make a living other than fishing.”

The group listened, and one man, a young boy named John, spoke up. “I have an idea. We could sell the fish we catch.”

“Excellent idea!” Henry exclaimed. “We can sell them to the city. They can use them for their own cooking.”

The group agreed, and they began to sell their fish. They soon discovered that they were making good money, and their spirits soared. The city was grateful, and they became heroes in the town.

From that day on, the fishermen and the city worked together, and the town flourished. The fishermen continued to catch fish, and the city continued to sell them. The town was happy, and life was good.

Mistaken Identity

By CHARLES WITTEN

All the children were huddled together in the crowded and dark room. The air was thick with the smell of sweat and fear. Suddenly, a loud noise shattered the silence. It was the sound of footsteps, and everyone froze in terror.

A woman entered the room, and the children immediately began to cry. She was a kind soul, and she tried to calm them down. She gave them food and water, and she tried to explain what had happened.

The children were then gathered into small groups, and they were taken to a different room. There, they were questioned by the police. They were asked about their families and their backgrounds, and they were made to feel very uncomfortable.

But the children were brave, and they stood strong. They knew that they were innocent, and they were determined to prove it. They told the police everything they knew, and they hoped that their story would be heard.

The children were eventually released, and they returned to their families. They were grateful for the woman who had helped them, and they knew that they had made a difference. From that day on, they were united, and they stood together for the truth.
