THE YOUNG WORKER

Unsung Youth: Their Songs and Their Songwriter

By BARNEY MASS

The young workers in the National Biscuit Company of Chicago greeted with enthusiasm the last "Young Worker" containing its expose of worker exploitation. When the league members appeared with the paper, over 600 were sold the first night. The night following some 800 were sold for the remaining days of the week. Over 1,000 "Young Workers" were sold.

That the basis of the contract with the food workers, acceded to by the National Biscuit Company with the Young Workers League efforts to get the unionization made, was shown by the police, was indicative of the methods the workers are using in purchasing the Young Worker League newspapers. It was also significant.
