FLUSHING, N.Y., Sept. 7.—The mine in the anthracite is 150 per cent of the way toward its end. The miners feel it. The operators are not so sure, although they may try to make it believe that the war is not going to have any effect on the miners. They have been working under the same conditions that the miners have been working under for years. Their main reason for this policy is the fact that the operators believe that if they shut down the coal mines now, they will have a worse situation later on. (Continued on page 4)
The Mideast: A tug of war over the Middle East

By RALPH S. FISHER

The United States and the Soviet Union are engaged in a diplomatic struggle over the Middle East. This struggle is a direct result of the October 1973 war between Israel and the Arab countries. The United States and the Soviet Union have been trying to gain control of the Middle East through the use of military force and by offering economic aid to the Arab countries.

The United States has been supporting Israel by providing military aid and by offering economic aid to the Arab countries. The Soviet Union has been supporting the Arab countries by providing military aid and by offering economic aid to the Arab countries.

The United States and the Soviet Union have been trying to gain control of the Middle East through the use of military force and by offering economic aid to the Arab countries. This struggle has been going on for many years and it is likely to continue for many years to come.
