Fat Boys At A. F. of L. Convention
Nothing For the Youth

BY SAM DARCY

DETOUR, Mich.—The forty-sixth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor has as usual disfrayed the issue of organizing and solving the problems facing the young. But this year, the issue was not so much about the young, but the issue of whether the young should have a voice in the convention.

During the hour of the convention, the young workers from the various locals were given the opportunity to speak. But when the time came for them to speak, they were met with a standing ovation from the floor, and the delegates grumbled and complained about the young workers being given the floor.

One of the young workers, a member of the Detroit Local, stood up and addressed the delegates. He spoke passionately about the need for the young workers to have a voice in the convention. He said that the young workers were the future of the labor movement, and that they deserved to have a say in the decisions that were being made.

The delegates, however, were not impressed. They continued to grumble and complain, and the young worker was met with a standing ovation from the floor.

In the end, the convention went on as usual, with the old men dominating the proceedings. But the young workers had made their voices heard, and they would continue to fight for their rights and for a voice in the labor movement.

RECALLING MINE WORKERS MARTYRS IN FIGHT AGAINST LEWIS-FARRINGTON

Summary:

The YOUTH IN MINE'S, SHOPS & INDUSTRIES page includes an article about women workers describing bomb fakes. The article discusses the challenges and conditions faced by women workers in mines, factories, and other industries. It highlights the importance of recognizing and remembering the sacrifices made by these workers in the fight for better working conditions.

WOMEN OF TWO CLASSES

By Young Paca Stiver Markham, a national defense worker, and fellow-workers, the lesson and the struggle will be a long time. It is only a beginning.

The struggle for women's rights has been a long and hard one. It is far from over, and the fight is far from won. Women have made many sacrifices and endured much in their efforts to gain equality and justice. Their struggle continues, and they will not rest until all women are treated with the same respect and dignity as men.

IRREGULAR EMPLOYMENT AND LOW EARNINGS CENTER WORRIES LOT IN INDUSTRY, REPORT SHOWS

By LEON GLOD, Prepared by Press

The report by the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that irregular employment and low earnings are still a serious problem in many industries. Workers in these industries often face uncertain and unpredictable work situations, which can cause financial stress and hardship. The report highlights the need for better job security and fair compensation for all workers.

MORE PROOF THAT BIRDS OF A FEATHER—

By A Young Worker Correspondent

NE WYORK CITY—"You can tell a woman by her clothes and bag," said a New York City woman. "But you can't tell a man by his clothes and bag."

The woman's words were spoken in the midst of a busy street corner, where men and women were rushing about, going to work and returning from work. The woman's bag was a large, black leather one, with a silver clasp. It was filled with books, papers, and other items. The man's bag was a small, brown leather one, with a gold clasp. It was filled with a few books, a letter, and a newspaper. The woman's clothes were neat and clean. She was wearing a dark green dress, with a white blouse and a black jacket. The man's clothes were also neat and clean. He was wearing a dark blue suit, with a white shirt and a black tie.
