ADENAUER BANS C.P. AND SEALS HIS DOOM

AFTER five full years of bitter court-room battling Adenauer's Supreme Court has declared that West German's Communist Party, which polled over 600,000 votes in the last elections, will be proscribed.

The effect of the decision is to place a virtual ban on the party. The ban, announced by Chancellor Adenauer, who himself is a member of the Christian Democratic Union, was confirmed by the 5th Supreme Court on Wednesday.

The decision was taken after two previous attempts by the court to reach a decision.

The court is expected to consider the matter of the ban on the party, which has been suspended, as a result of the decision. The court is expected to rule on the matter of the ban on the party, which has been suspended, as a result of the decision.

The decision is expected to have repercussions and instigate many court proceedings.

The Social Democratic, who are in the anti-communist alliance Adenauer, have declared themselves strongly opposed to any ban on the Communist Party.

The pro-communist Social Democrats, under Chancellor Adenauer, have been on the receiving end of criticism and condemnation from the opposition parties.

A Partial Victory

The victory is a partial victory for the Social Democrats, who have been in power for over 20 years. The Social Democrats have been criticized for their handling of the Adenauer government.
