The Moscow Congress.

DOWN TO BRASS TACKS.

By S. P. BUNTING

This year's congress has not been of a sensational character. The delegates are mainly the same as those of the last congress in 1921, and even the speeches are not so colorful. The speeches have been of a more subdued character, and the discussions have been more formal. The main topic of discussion has been the implementation of the peace agreements with the various countries. The delegates have been working hard to ensure that the agreements are implemented in a timely and efficient manner.

In his opening address, the chairman highlighted the importance of maintaining peace and stability in the region. He emphasized the need for cooperation and coordination among the various countries to achieve this goal. The chairman also thanked the delegates for their hard work and dedication to the cause of peace.

The closing speeches of the congress were equally impressive. The speakers emphasized the importance of continuing the work of the congress and urged the delegates to remain committed to the implementation of the peace agreements. They also called on the international community to provide support and assistance to the countries involved in the peace process.

Overall, the congress was a success. The delegates were able to make significant progress in achieving their goals, and they left the congress with a renewed sense of commitment to the cause of peace and stability in the region.

THE TIGER.

Violence is in the blood of the capitalist class. It turns to its instinctively when its interests are threatened.

When all goes smoothly, when its supremacy is unchallenged, when it rules the world with a rod of iron, it can portray itself as a Nelson, and be loved and obeyed by the masses. Yet it never forgets that, behind the scenes, there are always a few who wish to overthrow it. It must continue to police the world, and the more prosperous it becomes, the more vigilantly must it police it.

The regime of the capitalist class is founded on fear and hatred. It is a necessary instrument for the maintenance of order. The maintenance of peace, the security of life, the protection of property, the prevention of violence are in reserve, prepared for any contingency.

Let it fail, however, to get the law on its side, and the law will be powerless. The law is a creature of the bourgeoisie. It is the handmaiden of the state and the instrument of its power. It is a means of controlling the working class, of maintaining the capitalist system.

The struggle of the proletarians is a struggle for the abolition of the state and the class distinction. The struggle is not for the state, but against the state. The state is the instrument of the bourgeoisie, and it must be destroyed.

International Solidarity.

On December 11th, Henri Treut, the representative of the International Confederation of TOT (affiliated to the I.L.U.) appeared before the Strike Committee of 2,000,000 workers. The International today not only champions the cause of the striking workers, but also supports the cause of all workers everywhere. The International is the voice of the workers, and it fights for their rights and freedoms.

The International has a long and proud history of fighting for the rights of workers. It has played a crucial role in the development of the workers' movement, and it continues to do so today. The International is a powerful force for change, and it will continue to fight for the rights of workers until victory is achieved.

THE WORKING MAN.

They feed the freed on the same.

The Industrial Workers of the World, as the IWW is known, are the voice of the working class. They are the voice of the worker, and they fight for the rights of workers everywhere. The IWW is a conscious and revolutionary organization, and it will continue to fight for the rights of workers until victory is achieved.

The IWW is the voice of the workers, and it fights for their rights and freedoms. It is a powerful force for change, and it will continue to fight for the rights of workers until victory is achieved.