The Dissolution of the Reichstag and the C. P. of Germany.

By Paul Schwerin

The German Reichstag was dissolved on the 20th of October. It was the first occasion on which the character as a screen for the so-called Liberal Party, had been revealed to the people of the Rehich. The new German life is one of violence and murder. The German government is determined to carry on the war against the Social Democrats and to crush the C. P. of Germany. They will redouble their efforts to suppress the C. P. and to make it impossible for Social Democrats to organise their work. They will try to destroy the Social Democratic Party by the use of brute force and to prevent any further development of the work of the Social Democrats.

The Social Democrats have been forced to take a series of measures to defend themselves against the attacks of the government. They have organised a boycott of the government's publications and have organised a series of meetings to discuss the situation. They have also organised a series of strikes to show their determination to resist the government's efforts to suppress the Social Democratic Party.

The government's policy is to destroy the Social Democratic Party and to prevent any further development of their work. They are trying to prevent the Social Democrats from carrying on their work and to make it impossible for them to organise their work. You are treated like mere cattle, the capitalists suck your blood, you must fight for better conditions." The manager of one of the factories involved in the strike also stated of Coamide Mau, a miner: "There are no better conditions. The workers had unlimited confidence in him." Other witnesses stated that the Commissariat of the Alexandria coal mine was in charge of safety, but the miners were not satisfied with the conditions.

On the second day, the headline of the newspaper reads: "Alexandria miners strike." The strike is described as the largest in the history of the province. The miners demand a raise in wages and an end to the use of violence against them.

The strike continues, and the government is forced to negotiate with the miners. The miners agree to attend a meeting, but the government backs out at the last minute.

The strike continues, and the miners are joined by the workers of the Alexandria coal mine. The strike becomes a general strike, and the government is forced to negotiate with the union leaders.

The agreement is signed, and the strike is called off. The miners' demands are met, and the government takes steps to improve the working conditions of the miners.

The lesson of the strike is that workers have strength in numbers. The government will not be able to suppress the workers if they stand together.
