The Labour Government of Great Britain is a bourgeois imperialist government. It is a product of the most reactionary and anti-democratic forces in British society, including the Conservative and Liberal parties. The Labour Government is a tool of the capitalist class, serving to maintain the existing social relations and protect the interests of the ruling class. It is not the government of the working class, but rather the government of the capitalists and their allies. The Labour Government is designed to maintain the capitalist system, suppress class struggle, and prevent the development of a workers' government. The Labour Government is not a government of the people, but a government of the propertied classes.

Towards the working class in Britain, it adopted a policy of liberal repression as long as they remained quiet and did not act. With the development of the labour movement and the sharpening of class antagonisms, the Labour Government has resorted to more overt repression. The Labour Government uses the police, judiciary, and other state apparatuses to suppress the workers' movement, prevent the development of a workers' government, and maintain the capitalist system.

In its relations with the United States, the Labour Government is guided by imperialist considerations. It supports the imperialist policies of the United States and assists in the carrying out of the imperialist program in the world. The Labour Government is a tool of the imperialist powers and serves to maintain the existing social relations and protect the interests of the ruling class.

The Labour Government is not a government of the people, but a government of the propertied classes. It is not a government that represents the interests of the working class. It is a government that serves the interests of the capitalist class and maintains the capitalist system.
